TRUMAN TRIES TO FIND GOOD
LONDON ENVOYQUALIFICATIONS SET
HIGH FOR NEW U. S.
AMBASSADOR

BY ERNEST B. VACCARO
Washington, Sept. 23 (AP)—President Truman began looking around today for a man of "outstanding character and prestige" to be the new ambassador to Great Britain.

Close associates of the president, who would not be quoted by name, said those qualifications had been set for the London successor of W. Averell Harriman, named last night to be Secretary of Commerce.

They expressed the view that Harriman's appointment to succeed Henry A. Wallace as commerce secretary has helped the president's cause among members of Congress, newspapers and the general public.

Problems Only Shifted
In some respects, however, it only shifted his problem over into another field. Men close to the president take the attitude that the right appointment to the London post would go far to patch up any spots in American prestige abroad which may have been worn thin in the future which followed Wallace's public criticism of administration foreign policy and ultimately resulted in his dismissal.

Asked at a news conference today if Harriman's successor will be named soon, presidential Press Secretary Charles G. Ross told reporters, "I can't say."

Mr. Truman has repeatedly complained of the difficulty of getting outstanding men into government where salaries are far below what they receive in private life and where they are subject to criticism frequently voiced against office holders.

Atomic Team Delayed
Ross at the same conference said he could not forecast when Mr. Truman will announce the personnel of a five-member atomic energy commission authorized by the last session of Congress. In this case there apparently has been a delay occasioned by the need of finding five men who will work as a team. Varying economic and political philosophies of eligibles have made that difficult.

Many names were mentioned in speculation over Harriman's successor, but all lacked official sanction. Joseph E. Davies, former ambassador to Moscow, was among these. Other names suggested included those of World War II generals, among them Mark W. Clark, presently here reporting on officers at his Vienna army station.

Will Clayton, under Secretary of State, figured in such discussion but it was questioned whether he could be spared from the huge economic program job already mapped out.

Retiring Gov. Ellis Arnall of Georgia got an occasional mention in talk of political possibilities, and when career diplomats were under discussion the name of Freeman Matthews, head of the state department's office of European affairs, came up.

Tarrying Allied
Troops Lrk Reds;
Brazil Speaks Up

BY FRANCIS W. CARPENTER

Lake Success, N. Y., Sept. 23 (AP)—Soviet Russia for the first time in United Nations Security Council history lashed out tonight against the presence of United States troops in China, Iceland, and Latin America and drew a sharp response from the Brazilian delegate to the council.

The council adjourned until tomorrow after a three and one-half hour session without deciding whether to place on the agenda a resolution put forward by Andrei A. Gromyko, Soviet delegate and president of the council, asking for information on the dispositions of Allied troops in foreign non-enemy states.

Gromyko declared there had been a "wave of protests" against the continued stay of British and American troops in China, India, Iraq, Egypt, Iceland, Indonesia, Greece, Panama, Brazil and South America.

Dr. Pedro Leao Velloso, Brazilian delegate, snapped back that there is "not one United States soldier on Brazilian soil today as I speak to you." He supported British, United States, Australian and the Netherlands delegates in opposition to the Russian proposal, which so far has received the lone backing of the Polish delegate.

Gromyko named names in the council in response to a challenge from the United States, Britain and Australia to the surprise proposal Gromyko made last month.

STOCK MARKET
BREAK STUDIEDAttempt Made To Fix
Cause Of Sharp
Sept. 3 Slump

Philadelphia, Sept. 23 (AP)—An attempt to learn the cause of the stock market break last Sept. 3 will be made by the securities and exchange commission through reconstructing all sales for that day, James A. Treanor Jr., SEC director of the trading and exchange division, announced today.

Reconstruction of all transactions, sale by sale if possible, will be made from information received from questionnaires sent out by the commission Friday. Treanor said the market will be set up in 15-minute periods so the SEC will be able to determine what stocks were most active during what time of the day.

On Sept. 3, the stock market reporting its sharpest sell-off since 1930, hit a new average low for more than a year with losses for steel, motors, rails, industrials and utilities. The drops ranged from 1 to better than 14 points. Broken at the time attributed to the fall to various factors, citing particularly the "psychological" liquidation on the idea the decline of the previous three months mean the list was discounting a business peak late in 1946 and 1947.

Additionally, the international situation was cited as a cautionary speculative and investment element.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite was off 4.7 points at 66.3 when the market closed for the day Sept. 3, which was a new low since Aug. 25, 1945. It was the largest drop since June 16, 1930.

There have been several less serious stock market breaks since then.

Removal Of Beef
Controls Foreseen
Within Four Weeks

Chicago, Sept. 23 (AP)—The Chicago Tribune, in a dispatch from Washington, says that OPA price controls "may be removed from beef and cattle within the next three or four weeks, a meat industry spokesman said tonight."

The OPA's industry advisory committee on meat plans to meet in Washington tomorrow to consider filing a petition, probably Oct. 8, with Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, for removal of meat price controls.

The Tribune said the advisory committee "has been informed that the price control board would welcome such a petition on beef and would be inclined to act on it favorably," according to the meat industry spokesman, who was unnamed.

The story added: "Democratic party leaders, discouraged over prospects for the November congressional elections and the Wallace episode and other administration busters, are reported worried over the effect of the meat shortage on voters. As a consequence, they are plumping for an end to control."

Shady Deals Indicated
In War Surplus Sales;
Some Employees Fired

Washington, Sept. 23 (AP)—Brig. Gen. J. A. Mollison, deputy war assets administrator, told a Congressional investigating committee today that a number of WAA employees had been fired after "talk of dishonesty."

Mollison said evidence had been found of "mysterious" authorizations for sale of some surplus electronics equipment.

Moreover he disclosed that all shipments of surplus electronics materials to selling agencies have been frozen "until we can get our house in order." He said "practices by some agents" seeking surplus equipment for sale, Belmont Radio, Inc., he said, "had a monopoly on airborne radar equipment. That was not a good practice."

All sales agents contracts on electronics materials are being cancelled, he said, and "tighter contracts" are being drafted. He told the committee that agency sale costs have run as high as 65 per cent on some surpluses.

Mollison said he had found that around 200 radio trucks estimated to be worth $7,500 had been sold at $4,500 to Hallcrafters, Chicago, prior to creation of the War Assets Administration last March, and that "authorizations" were found to have been written on WAA stationery that was not in existence at the time the sales were made.

He told the committee also that he found, when he took over aircraft and the electronics division a few weeks ago, that there were a "favored few" sales agents who got the best of the electronics equipment for sale. Belmont Radio, Inc., he said, "had a monopoly on airborne radar equipment. That was not a good practice."

Committee Chairman Slaughter (D-Mo.) commented "that should have been very profitable" for the Belmont company.

When he took over electronics sales supervision, Mollison said "There was so much talk of dishonesty I decided where there was smoke there was fire. We had to let some people go. They were somewhat under suspicion." Mollison was the star witness as the house surplus property committee started an intensive inquiry into "sales expenses" in the disposal of the billions in war surpluses with Slaughter complaining that the expenses often exceed what the government gets from the surplus sales.

PEACE MEETING
MAY END OCT. 15

Paris, Sept. 23 (AP)—President Georges Bidault of France today called a meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers for tomorrow afternoon to attempt to iron out differences in proposed treaty amendments and pave the way for adjournment of the 21-nation peace conference by Oct. 15.

This was announced as the United States, in the conference itself, abandoned a stand taken in a treaty with Britain and France and aligned herself with payment for property losses to Allied nationals in Romania. Previously the three western powers had insisted on full payment for such losses.

In other conference developments today the Italians asked that Libya, Eritrea and Italian Somaliland be placed under Italian trusteeship, the United States reiterated opposition to approving in a treaty the forced transfer of 200,000 Hungarians from Czechoslovakia, and Greece demanded that the Bulgarians be compelled to destroy fortifications on the Greek-Bulgarian frontier.

The foreign ministers' deputies prepared an agenda for tomorrow's meeting of amendments on which there is but slight disagreement.

COURT FINDS
PLOT EXISTED
IN BRIBE CASERUSHTON TESTIFIES
IN LANSING BANK
BILL HEARING

BY ROBERTA APPLEGATE

Lansing, Sept. 23 (AP)—Circuit Judge Chester P. O'Hara ruled today that the prosecution had established a conspiracy in the examination of 19 defendants accused of conspiring to defeat the 1941 anti-branch bank bill, but held that not all the defendants had been connected with the conspiracy.

Defense attorneys have repeatedly objected to admission of testimony on grounds that the "corpus delicti," or criminal act, had not been shown.

Judge Changes Mind

Special Prosecutor Richard B. Foster apparently had won a major point with the ruling, but suffered a rebuff later when the judge "changed his mind" regarding the admissibility of an extrajudicial statement taken last May from former State Senator Carl F. Delano of Kalamazoo.

The court said that he "would admit" the statement against Delano only, but when William Henry Gallagher, attorney for bank-defendants in the case, asked to have other names in the statement stricken, the judge said he would continue to "hold in abeyance" his decision on admissibility of the statement.

He contended that "until other defendants are connected with the conspiracy it would not be fair to admit the statement. In other words, the court has changed his mind." He had been considering the prosecution's offer of the exhibit since last week.

The Ingham county one-man grand jury accused 14 present and former legislators and five representatives of the Michigan National Bank with exchanging bribes in an effort to defeat a bill to limit branch banking in Michigan. The Michigan National Bank opposed the bill.

Tells Of Appointment

Former Attorney General Herbert J. Rushton of Escanaba, who testified as a prosecution witness at the direction of the judge, said he knew Byron L. Ballard of Lansing, one of the defendants, was representing the Michigan National Bank when he was appointed legal adviser to former Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner in 1941.

Rushton told Foster, however, that Ballard had never told him he intended to represent his bank client before the governor or the legislature.

The former attorney general, whose petition started the grand jury investigation in 1941, said Ballard had told him at first he "didn't think he wanted the job because some proceedings might come along and I'd have to appear for one of my clients, and that might embarrass you."

Rushton said he told Ballard that "it wouldn't embarrass me any."

At the time, Rushton explained, a case started by the state against the bank group was pending in the state supreme court.

In another conversation, Rushton related, Ballard told him he didn't think he should take the job because he was connected with the bank "and didn't want to give up his clients. I told him I had

Factories Head For Auto
Production Record
Despite Shortages

BY DAVID J. WILKIE
Associated Press Automotive
Editor

Detroit, Sept. 23 (AP)—The nation's automobile industry which expected to produce close to 5,000,000 passenger cars this year will do well if it turns out half that number.

But, despite the shortages hampering passenger vehicle output, the factories apparently are headed for a new record in peacetime commercial car production. Prevailing estimates in automotive circles place the 1947 truck and other commercial unit output at more than 1,000,000.

Although there continues to be considerable talk in trade circles about passenger car demand falling off with increasing retail prices dealers generally still are obliged to decline thousands of new orders or accept them for possible deliveries in mid-1947.

The manufacturers have given up hope of lifting passenger car output to anything like the originally scheduled 1,200,000 in the final three months of the current year.

Another postwar production high level probably would have been set last week if Chrysler and Packard operations had not been interrupted by a strike that cut off their supply of bodies for most of the week.

RESTAURANTS TO CLOSE
Greenville, Mich., Sept. 23 (AP)—Owners of this city's 12 restaurants voted unanimously today to close their doors indefinitely if the OPA forces them to roll back the price of meat meals to June 30 levels.

Anthony Irla, spokesman for the group, said a cut in prices would make it impossible for them to stay in business.

Handsome Successor
To Wallace Supports
Byrnes Peace Policy

BY TOM WILLIAMS

London, Sept. 23 (AP)—W. Averell Harriman declared today "I fully support the foreign policy" of President Truman and Secretary of State Byrnes, and added he thought most other Americans held the same view.

The handsome diplomat who will succeed the ousted Henry Wallace as U. S. Secretary of Commerce said in a formal statement that he believed Mr. Truman and Secretary Byrnes were "carrying on the high principles laid down by Mr. Roosevelt. There lies the road to peace."

At a news conference held after the formal statement was issued Harriman declined to discuss further Mr. Byrnes' foreign policy. He commented that "American foreign policy in the last analysis is based on public opinion, and I think the main body of American public opinion is supporting Mr. Truman and Mr. Byrnes."

He disclosed he talked with Byrnes by telephone today and the latter had "a kind word" about the appointment. Harriman is planning to go to Paris, then will leave "relatively soon" for the United States.

Since the opening of the peace conference Harriman has spent most of his time in Paris. He returned to London about 10 days ago.

Asked if he planned to take part in the election campaign at home he replied "I haven't given that question any consideration at all."

Harriman declined to discuss the speech in New York by Wallace which led to his dismissal as Secretary of Commerce. Harriman had no comment also regarding his successor as U. S. ambassador to England.

He said that Mr. Truman mentioned the appointment to him in a telephone conversation Saturday night and that he told the president he was "not anxious to accept, since I wanted to check first with my legal and business advisers, and I asked him to give me until Sunday."

Mr. Truman called again at midnight Sunday. Harriman said he had conferred with his associates by telephone in the meantime and that he told the president "I was free to accept" the appointment. The president "made the announcement immediately afterwards," Harriman commented.

Police said the explosion occurred while the men were scrubbing floors with gasoline.

He predicted that this same factor will cause the Russians to make military reductions below their anticipated peacetime requirements.

SIZE TO SHRINK

Ceilings, Prices By
New OPA System

Washington, Sept. 23 (AP)—Candy bars selling for a nickel and a dime may shrink in size, the OPA said today at it allowed manufacturers to compute ceiling prices under a new system.

At the same time the pricing agency took these varied actions: Allowed users and holders of stocks of syrups and liquid sugar to use or dispose of old stocks without rationing in order to ease hardships resulting from the August 22 order that tightened rationing of syrups.

Raised prices on nail kegs and western softwood shingles in order to boost production of both for the housing program.

Upped ceiling prices 12 per cent on innerspring mattresses sold directly to consumers by manufacturers, in order to equal increases previously allowed on mattresses moving through usual trade distribution.

The new price rules on the five to ten cent items includes small packages of wafers, mints, caramels, fudges, gums, and flavored hard candy tablets as well as candy bars.

Under it manufacturers may either lift prices or reduce sizes but OPA said most items will be smaller because of a desire to stay in the nickel and dime classes.

VAST PROFITS
BARED IN WAR
SHIP BUILDINGFEW MADE WEALTHY WITH NO RISK AS TAXPAYERS PAY

Washington, Sept. 23 (AP)—The maritime commission reported today that the St. Johns River Shipbuilding Co. of Florida reaped wartime profits of $2,080,000 on an original investment of $600.

This was one of 19 companies covered in a commission report to the house merchant marine committee as it opened an inquiry into shipbuilding profits with Henry J. Kaiser as a witness. The report showed that the 19 firms put up $22,979,275 capital to make estimated profits of $356,006,612.

Ralph E. Casey, general accounting office attorney, cited the maritime commission figures as showing that companies owned or controlled by Kaiser made profits estimated at $192,237,284 on a total capital investment of $2,510,000.

Government Fools Bill
Kaiser defended his companies' operations, insisted that invested capital was not the main standard for war production, and declared that "we employed over $32,000,000 of risk capital obtained from private sources for the wartime operation of the seven shipyards under our management."

REPORT 'FANTASTIC'
Jacksonville, Fla., Sept. 23 (AP)—A maritime commission report that the St. Johns River Shipbuilding Co. reaped wartime profits of $2,080,000 on an investment of $600 was termed "fantastic" tonight by Kenneth A. Merrill, shipyard executive and vice president of the now defunct corporation.

"We did nothing but manage the enterprise and we were on a fee basis from the maritime commission," Merrill asserted. "We couldn't do a thing in the yard without maritime commission approval."

Casey reported that all 19 companies operated shipyards built entirely with government funds. Citing what he called "unreasonable" profits, he said:

"I dare say that at no time in the history of American business, whether in wartime or in peacetime, have so few men made so much money with so little risk—and all at the expense of the taxpayers, not only of this generation but generations to come."

The general accounting office, Casey added, viewed the wartime shipbuilding program as "a complete exemplification of all the deficiencies in government wartime procurement."

The shipbuilders, operating under maritime commission contracts, he said, "were really only managers of government shipyards—and an advisable managers at that, inasmuch as no skill or ability was required to make money when you consider the extent to which the maritime commission went not only to insure them against loss but to guarantee them huge profits."

Defends His Record
Kaiser branded as "wholly untrue" statements by some congressmen that he "operated shipyards on only $100,000 capital."

"We, the Kaiser men and women, did an outstanding job," he declared. "We're proud of it. We alone produced 27 per cent of the entire maritime ship program. We did this at a saving of more than $250,000,000 to the government on Liberty ships alone. We provided the organization, the major portion of the operating capital, the brains, and the drive."

CENTER OF OUR GALAXY FOUND

Infrared Light Is Used On Milky Way By Astronomers

By CHARLES A. FEDERER, Jr.
Madison, Wis.—(SS)—A new light has been thrown on the position of the center of the Milky Way galaxy, but it was "dark" or infrared light. Dr. Joel Stebbins and Dr. A. E. Whitford, astronomers at the University of Madison's Washburn Observatory, where the meeting of the American Astronomical Society is being held, told members of their work during the summers of 1945 and 1946, using the 60-inch reflecting telescope atop Mount Wilson in California.

The apparent position of the center of our galaxy in the direction of the constellation of Sagittarius has been known for a quarter of a century, but a bright nucleus or clustering of stars about the center as in other galaxies has never been observed, presumably because it was obscured by interstellar dust clouds.

To penetrate the interstellar clouds, the Wisconsin astronomers used infrared light. The effect is just the same as using a color screen and red-sensitive plates to photograph more clearly distant landscapes seen through the earth's atmosphere. They attached to the 60-inch telescope a photocell and filter glass giving effective sensitivity near wavelength 10,300 angstroms, or 1.03 microns, definitely in the infrared region well beyond the sensitivity of the human eye.

They swept the telescope across the region of Sagittarius, repeating each sweep with red or violet filters to identify foreground stars and star clouds by their color. Any feature near the actual center of the galaxy would surely be much reddened by the greater absorption of its light while traveling the greater distance to reach the earth.

Parallel to the equator of the galaxy, a persistent bulge was found, its form being roughly outlined by an elliptical figure some 8 degrees long and 3 1/2 degrees wide, with its center at longitude 326 1/2 degrees. The apparent photographic magnitude (not infrared) of the bulge would be magnitude 24.5 per square second, or only 1/10 the brightness of the darkest patch of blank sky in the neighborhood, and therefore impossible to observe in ordinary photographic light.

"Although the actual nucleus has not been found, the reasons for believing that the central region has been outlined are: its position, its form, and above all its extreme redness, which indicates that less than 1/1000 of the ordinary blue photographic light gets through the obscuring interstellar dust," Dr. Stebbins stated.

Restaurants Lose Suit In Wisconsin On OPA Rollback

Milwaukee, Sept. 23. (AP)—Federal Judge F. Ryan Duffy today denied the petition of the Wisconsin Restaurant Association for an injunction to restrain the Office of Price Administration from enforcing an order rolling restaurant meat meal prices back to the level of April 4-10, 1943.

The court accepted the argument of Leve K. Beznor, district OPA enforcement attorney, that it was without jurisdiction to issue such an injunction.

Train Dynamited; Armed Jews Cut Haifa-Egypt Line

BY CARTER L. DAVIDSON
Haifa, Palestine, Sept. 23. (AP)—An armed band of Jews severed rail connections between Haifa and Egypt tonight by dynamiting a train between Hadera and Lydda on the coastal plain. There were no casualties.

Official reports said the Jews halted the train on a lonely stretch of track, ordered the crew off, then placed explosives under the engine and cars. The engine and two coaches were believed to have been destroyed and several other cars damaged.

Earlier, approximately 600 illegal Jewish immigrants were transferred to a British troopship here for transshipment to Cyprus, after nearly 100 of them had dived over the side of the blockade runner Palmakh in a desperate, unsuccessful attempt to swim to the Holy Land.

Six soldiers leaped in among the frantic swimmers and fastened ropes to them, as British soldiers and sailors teamed up with Palestine police in preventing the mass escape plan. Police and navy launches scoured through the waters picking up the immigrants.

Rioting Flares Up Again In Calcutta; Mob Throws Stones

BY WALTER MASON
New Delhi, Sept. 23. (AP)—Seven deaths and scores of stabbings and bludgeoning casualties were reported in India today as New Hindu-Muslim violence flared in several cities, including Bombay and Calcutta.

In rioting which began last night in Calcutta, three persons were killed and more than 50 wounded. Four persons were killed and 12 injured in riots at Jammu, in Northern Kashmir province. Police and military reinforcements were rushed to Jammu from different parts of Kashmir.

During the rioting today, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru asked to be relieved as president of the all-India congress in order better to carry out his new duties as leading minister in India's interim government.

A mob that broke into a home last night in Calcutta set off the riots there. Tension was mounting in sections of the city where the bloodiest fighting occurred during last month's carnage in which more than 3,000 persons were killed.

Trams were stoned and rocks hurled at passersby in the north and east sections of Calcutta. Transportation was disrupted, and police and military forces placed heavy guard detachments in the area.

Daughter, 12, Kills Mother In Accident Handling Shotgun

Peck, Mich., Sept. 23. (AP)—Sheriff Roland Meredith of Sanilac county said today that authorities are satisfied that the death of Mrs. Arline G. Smith, 35, from a shotgun in the hands of her 12-year-old daughter, was accidental. An inquest may still be held, but only to reconstruct details of the tragic accident which he said occurred when Barbara Sullivan, daughter of Mrs. Smith by an earlier marriage, picked up the gun in a kitchen in the home of friends.

The weapon discharged, Meredith said, and Mrs. Smith, wife of Navy warrant officer Bruce Smith of Boston, Mass., was shot in the back. She died less than 15 minutes later.

no objection to his representing his client."

Old Clients Retained
On cross-examination by Gallagher, Rushton testified that attorneys who became attorney general or assistant attorney general commonly retained their clients while in office.

Rushton testified he had expressed willingness for Ballard to argue against the state in the supreme court hearings, and that he had talked with the governor about Ballard's unwillingness to serve except on a part-time basis. The judge, ruling that a conspiracy had been established, said the contention of the defense attorneys that bribe giving and receiving was not a conspiracy was "not well founded."

Judge O'Hara said it was "beyond the conception of the court that an attempt to corrupt officials or the due course of legislation is not a crime at common law. I know of nothing more subversive of the United States theory of law than an attempt to corrupt the legislature."

Reece Says Nation May Lose Next War If Democrats Stay

BY WILLIAM L. MADIGAN
French Lick, Ind.—(AP)—Charging New Deal "economic cannibalism" was destroying the country's productive power, National Chairman B. Carroll Reece tonight told Indiana Republicans that unless their party won November's election America might lose the next war.

In a speech prepared for delivery before the Indiana Republican Editorial Association, Reece asserted:

"They (the Democrats) are destroying the welfare of the worker by destroying the tools with which he makes his living and they are destroying our national security by killing off the mechanical workers that enabled us to win history's greatest war."

"Unless something is done—and done this November—we might not win the next one. The American people realize this situation and that is why they are going to elect a Republican congress this year."

Airmen Will Hunt Lost Fliers Held As Slaves By Lolos

Nanking, Sept. 23. (AP)—U. S. air force units in China were ordered today to assist in finding and rescuing American airmen who have been reported living in bondage in western China.

Reports that some long-missing members of B-29 crews may be living as slaves of the savage Lolo tribes are being investigated by American military authorities. U. S. Ambassador J. Leighton Stuart said the reports came from sources which he considered reliable.

Brig. Gen. John P. McConnell, commanding the Air Advisory Division in China, said the American graves registration service had been notified that it would have the assistance of air advisory units assigned to the Chinese air force technical schools in Chengtu.

Officials of the graves registration section told the Associated Press in Shanghai that every possible step was being taken to liberate any American fliers who may be held by the Lolos.

Ships Start Moving In Harbors Tied Up By Maritime Strike

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Ships started moving yesterday out of harbors which had been bottle-necked for 17 days by the most serious maritime strike in American history.

Dock and ship workers returned to their jobs after the strike ended Saturday night when west coast unions followed Atlantic and Gulf coast seamen in accepting a wage scale increase decided upon by a federal mediator.

The decision hiked wages of able bodied seamen to $172.50 a month and firemen and water-tenders to $177.50.

But, there was a possibility port would be free of a major strike only a short time.

Harry Bridges' West Coast CIO Longshoremen, the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association (CIO) in New York, and the Masters, Mates and Pilots (AFL) are now negotiating with operators for new contract terms.

These three unions have threatened to strike at the expiration of their contracts Sept. 30 unless the operators meet their terms.

Power Tieup Again Facing Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Sept. 23. (AP)—Working feverishly under pressure of an impending power strike—the third to hit the Pittsburgh metropolitan area in seven months—city officials today made widespread precautions to protect the health and safety of 1,500,000 persons in the affected district.

The on-again, off-again strike of 3,500 Duquesne Light Co. employees seeking wage increases was set for 8:30 a. m. (CDT) tomorrow by George L. Mueller, president of the Independent Association of Employees of the Duquesne Light and Associated Companies.

Thirty-seven Diesel power generators, which the city returned only last week to the army, were brought back again for distribution to hospitals, pumping stations, the incinerator plant and morgue. Swimming pools were filled with water and red lanterns readied for distribution at dangerous street intersections.

Used Car Dealers Get Organized To Fight Black Market

Chicago, Sept. 23. (AP)—S. B. Jacobson, a New Orleans used car dealer, said today a National Used Car Dealers' Association would be organized tomorrow, with its aim, among other things, "to fight every effort which tends to create black markets."

Jacobson said more than 500 dealers, representing approximately 50,000 used car sellers in all sections of the country, have registered for the organizational meeting.

Other aims of the new association, he said, were: to gain national acceptance in the used car industry of a code of ethics and standard trade practices; to resist efforts against small business, particularly the used car industry; and to provide a means of quick, concerted action by the whole industry on questions affecting its interests.

FARMERS HOLDING BACK
Lansing, Sept. 23. (AP)—Governor Kelly today asked the state agriculture department to investigate charges by Rep. Casper P. Kenny, Flint Democrat, that farmers are holding back their meat to "wreck the OPA." Kelly said the report, when received, will be made public.

BETTER ROADS ARE NEEDED

Improved Highways Are Seen As Benefit To Education

Washington—The old mud road leading to the "little red school house" must pass from the American scene, or many of the 4,400,000 rural children who are transported to modern centralized schools will continue to be "ten-o'clock scholars" on snowy and muddy days.

According to Charles M. Upham, engineer-director of the American Road Builders' Association, 40,000 consolidated schools require from 80,000 to 90,000 buses which travel an average of 25 miles daily in one-way operation. There are at least 10,000 other schools that should be centralized, but most of them are on mud roads.

The dollar-and-cents value of all-weather surfaces for secondary or side-roads will benefit rural education, as well as farmers who have to take produce to town. Mr. Upham also suggested that tax-payers will be glad to learn that the average transportation cost of $24.50 per rural pupil for a year is actually less than the same pupil would spend in street-car or bus fare in the average city.

Staff Bids Goodbye To Henry Wallace, Lauds Leadership

Washington, Sept. 23. (AP)—Nearly 300 commerce department employees said goodbye today to Henry A. Wallace and told him they could pay him "no greater tribute" than by carrying on "that enthusiasm for our jobs and for the welfare of the Department of Commerce which you have left us."

In a letter signed by those attending a two hour informal reception which marked the ousted secretary's last appearance in his office, the employees expressed regret at his leaving and said that: "Your leadership during the immediate post-war reconversion period has been an inspiration to each of us, individually, and to the department as a whole."

It was understood that Wallace, fired Friday by President Truman after a controversy over his foreign policy views, had no immediate plans. He will stay in Washington for the next several weeks.

Civilian Defense Office In Michigan Closes Doors Oct. 1

Lansing, Sept. 23. (AP)—The state Office of Civilian Defense, which at its peak had 525,000 persons enrolled in its programs, will close its doors October 1 in compliance with a directive issued today by Governor Kelly.

Kelly asked Capt. Donald S. Leonard, director, and the personnel of local councils, to remain on a volunteer, stand-by basis, to keep the OCD organization prepared to handle, without public expense, any emergency problem. The OCD probably will not be terminated officially until Congress formally declares World War II at an end, the governor said.

One of the organization's first jobs on its stand-by basis, Leonard announced today, would be to accept the federal solid fuels administration request to act again as a liaison agency in meeting a coal shortage in Michigan.

VAST PROFITS BARED IN WAR SHIP BUILDING

Kaiser corporations, he testified, amounted to less than one-tenth of one per cent of dollar volume, including material costs, after taxes and after deducting losses.

In addition, he said, Kaiser enterprises performed more than $210,000,000 of construction for the government without profit.

"Great war production, great savings in time and dollars, comparatively small government financing, small profits, no favoritism: on this record Kaiser enterprises stand—and look forward to a great future," he said.

Kaiser complained that he alone was required by the committee to furnish data on personal dividends and dividends of his family. He said it is difficult to

Wage Negotiations For Western Union Employees Collapse

Washington, Sept. 23. (AP)—The government received formal notification today that wage negotiations between the AFL and the CIO and the Western Union Telegraph Company had broken down and that the AFL workers may strike within 30 days.

The company insisted that in both instances the discussions had collapsed due to the union's refusal to await stabilization board approval of increases recommended by a fact finding board, or to agree to a "reasonable moratorium on further wage demands."

First Of 50,000 Idle Auto Workers Return In Detroit

Detroit, Sept. 23. (AP)—The first of nearly 50,000 idle automotive workers returned to their jobs today following settlement of a strike that shut off the flow of production supplies.

An estimated 1,200 workers returned to the Outer Drive plant of the Briggs Manufacturing Co., strikebound since Sept. 13 in a dispute over the discharge of a union steward, after agreeing to submit differences to arbitration.

This opened the path for Briggs to recall others of its 15,000 employees whose automotive body-producing plants were affected by the strike-created shortages.

Chrysler Corp. summoned the first of an estimated 33,700 idle workers back on Tuesday's shift, and the Packard Motor Car Co. sent out similar orders to its 1,100 employees.

MEMORIAL FOR PEACE PLANNED

Committee To Formulate Program Will Meet Monday Night

About twenty representatives of Escanaba organizations interested in plans for a community memorial honoring those who served in World War II met last night in Bonifas auditorium and voted for the appointment of a committee which will proceed with plans for a permanent organization.

George Grenholm, city recreation director, was chairman of the meeting and announced that the committee will be named within a few days. The committee will be composed of persons representing churches, industry, labor, civic and fraternal clubs and other organizations. This committee will meet at 7:30 p. m. Monday, Sept. 30, in the Chamber of Commerce office.

Following a talk by Patrick L. Bennett of Marquette on the subject of living memorials, there was discussion in which the consensus of opinion appeared to favor a memorial community building combining a swimming pool and other recreation facilities. Joining in the discussion were John J. Bartella, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Mayor Marvin L. Coon, John Fawcett, chairman of the city recreation board, and others.

In his talk on memorials, Bennett said:

"Why a memorial? To remind us of war? No, my friends, not to remind us of the horrors of war, but to remember those who gained for us through their personal sacrifice—peace. It really could be called peace memorials. What is a memorial? A memorial is a thing intended to keep in mind an event, a place, a person as a monument. Surely you see in every day life memorials, if you want to call them such, all around us. Our cities throughout the Nation have many memorials that have historical backgrounds. These same monuments or memorials perhaps had their start by a meeting such as is being held here this evening.

"Many questions can and will arise over the proposed type of monument. Will it be a memorial carrying the names of those who served? Will it be a statue? Will it be a plaque or what will it be?

Will it be a living memorial—something that just isn't a cold piece of steel or marble or will it be something that will live in the hearts of the people of this city.

"I always like to think of a memorial as something that lives and will live on long after the men and women in whose honor it has been erected have gone to their just reward.

"I am sure that when a memorial is erected in this city, no matter what it be, the living veterans will appreciate the honor you now give them. The dead heroes will never see what you erect but they trust you, as Americans, to remember their sacrifices with a fitting memorial.

"We are told by church, civic and police officials that the juvenile problem here in America is something that can't be pushed aside as a normal reaction after a great war. We at home must put our heads and hearts together to bring about a solution to this problem."

Potato Spray Plots Inspected In Delta

Dr. C. H. Munice and Dr. Walter Morofsky of Michigan State College, East Lansing, will be in Delta county today to accompany E. A. Wenner, county agricultural agent, in an inspection-harvesting of potato spray plots.

The spray plots in this and other counties are established to determine the effectiveness of standard or new sprays in controlling potato blight. In this county the standard Bordeaux, and F-48 and Dithane sprays are being tested.

Today potatoes in the spray plots will be harvested in the final inspection of the season—to determine what effect if any the sprays have on yield. Although some sprays may be effective control for blight and disease, they also may reduce yield, Wenner pointed out.

Escaped Murderer Is Still At Large

State police and other officers yesterday continued their search for Steve M. Kelemen, missing life-term Marquette prison inmate who escaped five days ago. Highway blockades have been established and maintained at strategic points, while the search has been concentrated in an area south of Marquette where officers believe Kelemen is "laying low" until "the heat is off".

Marquette officers said, however, that hunger may force him—like so many others who have enjoyed a few days' freedom from the prison—to give himself up. Or he may attempt to obtain food from a farmhouse. Officers warned householders and car owners to keep firearms hidden and cars locked.

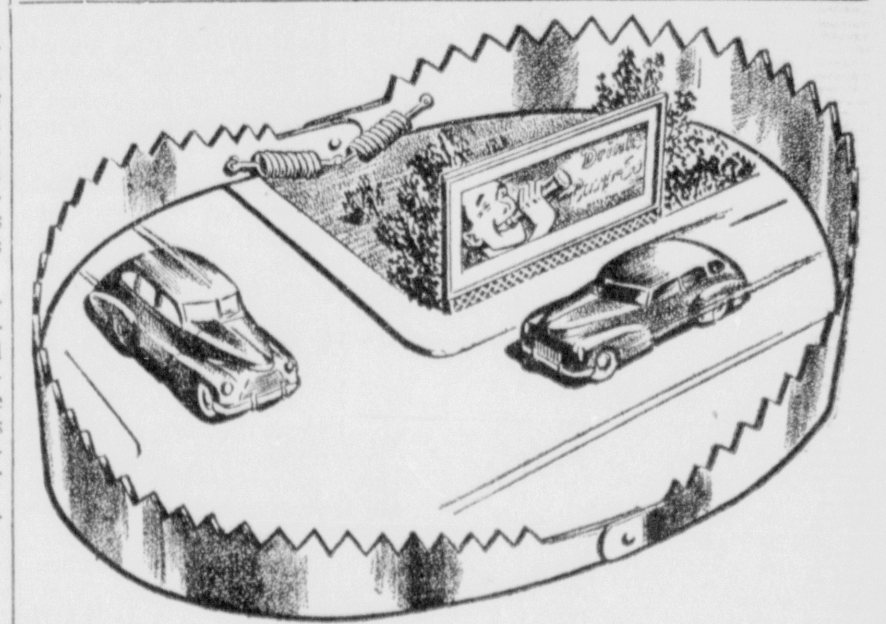

Transferred from Jackson prison to Marquette in 1935, Kelemen had a good prison record here. He was suspected of participation in planning an escape about five years ago, but it was not proved. "His attitude apparently had changed in the last four years, but a mistake was made in classifying him for medium custody," the Warden John Bush said. Kelemen, 43 years old, is 5 feet, 5½ inches tall and weighs 150 pounds. He has a dark complexion, blue eyes, brown hair, very peaked nose and skinny facial features. He probably is wearing dark shell-rimmed glasses and may be wearing a mackinaw coat in addition to regular prison clothes. Any person seeing anyone answering Kelemen's description is asked to call the prison, state police or any law enforcement officer.

Your Comfort and Convenience
are Our First Concern

A return to traditional standards of comfort and convenience has been Greyhound's goal ever since the war. Much progress has been made. Soon, we hope, there will be ample accommodations for everyone—wherever and whenever they may want to go.

Temporarily, however, there may be certain times when the great volume of post-war travel places an unusually heavy burden on our facilities. Should you be inconvenienced during these periods, please understand that the condition is one which is beyond our control.

90 new buses have been ordered for use in this territory. But they have been delayed by reconversion difficulties. And these same difficulties also have retarded delivery of needed repair parts. Only recently, as many as 70 of our present buses were tied up in Northland garages—waiting for necessary parts.

When the 90 buses on order become buses in actual service on the highways, and when there's an adequate flow of repair and replacement parts, thousands of additional seats will be at the service of Greyhound travelers in this and neighboring states.

That means more comfort, more convenience, more schedules over popular routes, more time-saving Express runs between distant points. Coming, too, are new and improved terminal facilities and wayside stations—finer service in every way.

Resort At Fayette

WHILE many persons will regret that Fayette was not acquired as a state park, there is much consolation to be derived from the fact that the new owner plans an outstanding resort development on the site of the ghost furnace town.

Fayette long has been regarded as one of the most scenic spots in the Upper Peninsula. For years, efforts have been made to have it acquired with public funds for a state or county park, but to no avail. It has finally changed hands in the feverish postwar rush for farms, recreational lands and other properties.

Miss Gladys Edwards, a Detroit business woman, who is the new owner of the 100-acre tract at Fayette, is reported to be planning to build a hotel, cabins, golf course and make improvements to the beach and docks. If her plans are carried out, Fayette as a commercial resort may be worth more eventually to the Garden Peninsula than a state park.

The Upper Peninsula still has a shortage of resorts like Blaney Park and other properties on the Door Peninsula of Wisconsin and the Lower Peninsula of Michigan. A modern, well-equipped and well-managed resort at Fayette would be a valuable asset to Delta county and the surrounding district.

Helicopters Save Lives

THE rescue of 18 survivors of the Belgian air liner crash in the wilderness of northeast Newfoundland by an American army rescue team and coast guard aircraft constitutes a humanitarian achievement of which the nation can be justly proud.

The actual rescue could not have been accomplished in the speed required to save the injured except for the efficient use of coast guard helicopters which brought air service to within a quarter mile of the scene of the crash, landing on a boggy plateau from which no other type of vehicles could land or take-off.

The injured were moved on litters the short distance to the helicopters, thence transferred to Catalina flying boats via the helicopters and finally flown to the hospital at Gander, Newfoundland. Some of the injured were flown directly to the hospital by the helicopters.

The success of the rescue mission was due in no small measure to the devotion to duty of Captain Samuel Martin, United States army doctor, and a 13-man army rescue team who moved in overland and treated the survivors for four days before the evacuation could be accomplished.

The value of helicopters in rescue work was proved many, many times during the war. Unfortunately, there still is a shortage of these marvelous machines, which require no elaborate landing fields. Eventually helicopter units will be available in virtually all cities, not only for rescue missions, but for the myriad of other purposes for which these machines can be used. They are destined to play an increasingly greater part in air transportation of the future.

OCD to Quit

THE Michigan Office of Civilian Defense, which has carried a payroll of $1,365 a month for 13 months after V-J day, has finally announced that it is willing to accept its termination.

The OCD was organized in Michigan to mobilize the civilian population for enemy attacks, which fortunately never came. Long after the threat of invasion and war plane attacks had disappeared, the well-paid employees of the OCD office stayed on the job, trying to make their work appear important to the taxpayers.

OCD offices in Lansing should have been closed many months ago, but the employees tried to hold on to their sinecures as long as possible. They gained in a financial way, but they lost a considerable amount of public respect.

Legalized Gambling

A NEW JERSEY judge has urged that his state's constitution be revised to permit legalized and regulated gambling. Thus one more voice has been added to the small, faint chorus which recently has been making the same suggestion.

The very idea of putting gambling on a legitimate basis and sweetening the public till from the proceeds is repugnant to many, perhaps most, Americans. They are unmoved by the classic arguments that gamblers will gamble anyway, as drinkers drank during prohibition; that some official is getting rich on "protection" where gambling flourishes; that this protection might as well be paid in taxes.

What seems to have swelled the faint chorus of support is the experience where legal gambling is actually in operation. In little Saratoga County, N. Y., betting taxes from a four-week race meet netted the county $1,062,000. As a result the county tax has been abolished, the budget increased for next year, and a surplus of $312,000 earmarked for retirement of county bonds. It is perhaps understandable that some moral resentment by Saratoga County citizens may have evaporated in the face of this windfall. It's pretty hard to get mad over lower taxes.

Divorce Rate Mounts

THE sharply rising increase in divorces in Michigan, particularly in Wayne county where the divorce rate has reached 100 per day, is the cause of considerable apprehension among church groups, who see in the rising divorce rate a further breaking down of the family unit.

The mounting incidence of divorce undoubtedly is due in considerable degree to the wartime marriage boom. Coupled with this is the housing shortage and other unhappy social factors created by the war.

Current marriage and divorce statistics show that one marriage out of three is headed for the rocks and that the rate is on the increase to an even more alarming degree. The social problems that develop from the wreckage of family lives are tremendous and should be of deep concern to the entire public.

Tightening of the divorce laws is advocated as one solution to the problem and undoubtedly that would help, but it would not solve the whole problem. Married people must be taught to assume the responsibilities that their marriage union involves. The churches are doing all that they can to teach that responsibility but obviously it is not enough. If it were the divorce rate would be decreasing rather than increasing.

THE IMMORTALIZED LUMBERING (Grand Rapids Press)

Stewart Edward White not only was the most widely read of all Grand Rapids native writers, he also for more than three decades was one of America's most prominent literary figures. No fewer than 51 books came from his pen, the last of which was "The Stars Are Still There," published this year.

For Michigan readers perhaps his most interesting novels are the three he wrote between 1902 and 1908, with this state as a background. Those three, of course, are "Blazed Trail," "The Forest" and "The Riverman," of which the first named still ranks as the best fictional treatment available of the great saga of Michigan's lumber industry. In his novels of the Michigan woods there are the smell of pine and the sting of driven snow; in them, White established himself as the forerunner of an entire school of writers who turned to the north woods for their settings, but White's books still tower above the others in sheer force, historical accuracy and atmosphere. Nor should the enduring popularity of his Bobby Orde stories be overlooked, for they continue as perennial favorites of young readers although they first appeared 35 years ago.

Stewart White's literary interests, however, were not confined to Michigan. In fact, his novels dealing with California gold rush days are considered among his best works. He wrote equally engrossing tales of pioneer days in various parts of America, of the early west and Africa. And his "Arizona Nights," written in 1907, is still one of the most fascinating volumes devoted to the southwest.

He led a full and exciting life, much of which found its way into his books, to the lasting enjoyment of generations to come. WORDS TO WATCH
Long-lived. This adjective means "having or inclined to have a long life." Despite the spelling, -lived is not the past tense of the verb "to live." It is a combining form from the noun "life." Therefore, -lived should have the long "i" sound as in "dived," in all the compound words, such as, short-lived, long-lived, nine-lived, etc.

Candidate. In British usage, the third syllable usually has the sound of short "i," as "KAN-di-dit." But American dictionaries prefer the long "a" sound, as in "bait, wait," thus: KAN-di-dai.

Overheard on a network newscast: "The new president of Mexico, MIG-u-yo-ull AL-uh-mun." El presidente's name is: Miguel Aleman. Miguel is the Spanish form of the name Michael. Aleman is Spanish for "German." Be sure to say: mee-GELL-ah-ay-MAHN (hard "g" in mee-GELL).

Cuisine. This French loan word means, "the kitchen; style of cooking; the food prepared," as, "Hotel Blank is noted for its excellent cuisine." The correct English pronunciation is as the French say it, thus: kwee-ZEEN.

Epoch means "a period of time marked by certain events," as, "Henry Ford started the epoch of the automobile." Do not say "EE-pock." Although "EE-pock" is listed as second choice in some dictionaries, it has never prevailed in American usage. Better say: EP-uck.

World Events Analyzed

BY BARNET NOVER

From the viewpoint of its tone and timing, even more than with respect to its substance, the Madison Square Garden speech of Henry A. Wallace was a singularly unfortunate statement.

It is quite possible that Secretary Wallace never intended his remarks to be a frontal criticism of the policies pursued by James F. Byrnes, presumably with the full and enthusiastic backing of President Truman. Indeed, there is passage after passage in the Wallace speech to which the Secretary of State could give his approval.

The fact remains that the tone and the timing of the Wallace speech, plus the initial, if offhand, approval given it by the President were such as to suggest either that the Administration had not really made up its mind regarding foreign policy or that the Byrnes policies were about to be scrapped.

At the Paris Peace Conference I had an opportunity to watch Secretary Byrnes in action at close range. I came away with real admiration for the way in which he has been conducting himself. And I might add that this feeling was very widespread at the conference.

Byrnes' role at Paris has been one of extraordinary difficulty. He knows how important it is for the United States in its foreign relations, and particularly in its relations with Russia, to follow a line that combines firmness with fairness. He is not one of those, nor for that matter is any other member of the American delegation, who believes in a policy of "getting tough" with Russia for the sake of getting tough.

That is the policy which Russia has pursued toward her allies and her neighbors with, it might be said, diminishingly successful results.

Nor do Mr. Byrnes and the members of his delegation believe in the inevitability of conflict with Russia. Their attitude excludes such pessimism. They assumed, and experience has proved it, that it will take a long time to work out a modus vivendi with Russia, but that this can only be done if the policy we pursue is one of devotion to our interests without sacrifice of principle. There are commitments we have made we must live up to. These commitments, in many instances, are Russia's as well as our own, and she, too, must live up to them.

It is one thing to discuss relations with Russia from the happy isolation of an ivory tower. It is quite another matter to have direct dealing with Russia either on Russia's own home grounds or abroad. That, from the viewpoint of American officials of varying political points of view, has been a uniformly discouraging procedure.

In any case the United States has during these last months hammered out a policy toward Russia which is not belligerent but which is also a far cry from the attitude of buying concessions.

This new policy has been making progress. Proof of this is to be found at the Paris Conference. It is even more observable in Germany where American and Russian policies directly clash. In the former Reich I found American military and civilian officials most enthusiastic about Byrnes' Stuttgart speech because, at long last, it represented a clear-cut, workable policy. That belief will now be clouded by doubt as a result of the Wallace speech.

In Europe generally one of the very few reasons which people have to be encouraged is that the United States has hammered out a firm and fixed line.

For a long time the nations and peoples of Europe had their doubts about the permanence of America's shift from isolation. In the back of everybody's mind was the belief that sooner or later the United States would again turn her back on Europe and that would mean not merely a Sovietized or Russian-dominated Eastern Europe but the entire Continent under the sway of the Kremlin.

The fact is that there is no way of dividing Europe into clearly delineated spheres of influence, as Mr. Wallace seems to suggest. Either all Europe is governed by a reign of law or it becomes the creature of anarchy with its recovery held back indefinitely.

It is because Mr. Byrnes has been so insistent on such a reign of law that he has made himself the leader of all the free nations at the Peace Conference, nations that are not body and soul creatures of the Kremlin. But he has never closed the door to agreement with Russia and has no intention of doing so.

After all, our interest in Eastern Europe cannot be dismissed as either unimportant or unworthy. What has happened in that part of the world has affected our destinies in the past and can do so again. That is why President Roosevelt, at Yalta, insisted on a program of democratic action in Poland and the former German satellites in the Balkans and got Stalin to agree to that program. The fact that neither in this nor in so many other particulars has Russia shown any disposition to live up to her pledges has been the basic reason for the growing cleavage between her and the western nations. This cannot be forgotten.

The importance of a coherent and stable American policy is so great that anything which tends to suggest that we lack it is unfortunate and dangerous. By the same token the Wallace speech has been a body blow to American influence at a critical time.

Grosgrain is a name given to silk cloth having heavy (gros) transverse cords. The word is French, but the American pronunciation is only partly French. The "o" is long, as in "hoe, toe," and the "s" is silent. The second syllable, -grain, is pronounced as in English, thus: GROE-grain.

Britain Isn't the Only Nation With a Squatters Problem

Good Morning!

By The Bugler

THE WORLD TODAY — It is not a very remarkable observation, but one often overlooked, that the same conditions, prejudices, hopes and fears evident in your own community are those found in the world today. It would undoubtedly be an oversimplification to say that the same application of faith, hope, charity and hard work which solves community problems might also solve the difficulties of the world. Yet no one will ever know how successful such an effort might be unless the effort is made.

If you are of the Chamber of Commerce or service club type that believes in its own slogans, it would be difficult not to apply those ideals to the world as well as to your community, your state, and your nation. "Don't knock the wheel" — "What helps the community helps you" — "If you won't help, don't hinder" — go the slogans in which many Americans believe and by which they work and live.

It may take a long time before we have a World Chamber of Commerce, or an International Development Bureau. But some service club organizations are international in scope, there is an international Red Cross, and the infant United Nations Security Council may hold the promise of international peace.

OF LITTLE FAITH — Within the community you have abetted poverty (the Red Cross recently appealed for clothing for Delta county children of unfortunate families); you have those who need financial assistance to establish themselves in business (several new industries were encouraged to locate in Escanaba through an industrial development program sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce); and the wealthy who make gifts to provide better educational facilities for the young.

Yet within that same community there are people who believe that similar evidences of good will and sound judgement to bring about a better world would not only be hopeless—it would be dangerous.

They believe this because they are still consumed with the fever of "community spirit," which translated into world affairs becomes "nationalism." They may grasp the wisdom of community, state and national cooperation, but they refuse to consider the hurdle of world wide cooperation. This hurdle must be considered by the individual American from the standpoint of helpfulness.

Growing efforts under way at the peace conference in Paris must be thought of in the light of community slogans—"If you can't boost—don't knock" for example. No community (and the world is a community in a larger sense) can achieve a semblance of unity in solving any problem unless there is a courageous and confident approach.

THE NEXT WAR—It is an unusual commentary upon our thought processes, but Americans in the deaths of war fight for a permanent peace, and after achieving peace refuse to seriously consider the possibility of making peace permanent. There is talk from too many quarters about war, and too little

INTO THE PAST

10 Years Ago—1936

Munising—Levi Brown, one of Munising's oldest pioneers, passed away this morning at five o'clock. He was 73 years old.

Gladstone — Albert Harris is leaving this morning for Houghton where he has enrolled in the Michigan College of Mining and Technology.

Madrid—A ten-foot wall of water, released from Alberche dam by government forces, roared down on a column of fascists advancing on Madrid and swept many of them to their deaths. It was reported late last night.

Interested primarily in the nomination of R. B. Stack for state auditor general, a delegation of about 15 Delta county Democrats are taking an active part in the Democratic convention being held at Battle Creek today and tomorrow.

Manistique—Tom Sheppard was brought to the local hospital on Saturday, suffering from bruises and minor injuries received in an accident while employed at Gould City.

Announcement has been received of the birth of a daughter, born Sunday to Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Nearman at Iron Mountain. Mrs. Nearman was formerly Miss Geneva DeVost of this city.

Cloverland Post, American Legion, yesterday sent the following telegram to Gene Tunney, who telems Jack Dempsey in a championship bout tonight in Philadelphia: "We are with you, Big Boy; knock him cold."

about peace. Too many people who themselves would never fight, and who do not have sons or daughters to sacrifice, are making realistic plans for the "next war." They concentrate on war to the exclusion of peace, yet the expenditure of a similar amount of "peace boosting" would certainly be more helpful.

"We have to fight Russia sometime. It might as well be now," some of these people say. "As long as you have human nature, you'll have wars," say others.

Acceptance of a continual state of war as inevitable, and the belief that war solves problems is a hopelessly ignorant conception of the destiny of man.

Those who claim that war follows wars and that nothing can be done about it except to prepare for bigger wars will tell you that "history repeats itself." Although this contention is as full of holes as a Swiss cheese, if it were true there is no reason why men should hasten the cycle of destruction. At least we might make an effort to apply the brakes and slow down the war wagon to a more comfortable pace.

THE BORDERLINE—A glance at history shows the danger pattern behind, and as experience should teach the necessity for change. If history is repeating itself, it's getting to be more dangerous as time goes on—and the atomic bomb is a much more destructive weapon than a stone age spear, flint lock rifle, or cannon.

If the world peace boosters could organize as effectively in the promotion of peace as the militarists have in promulgating the idea that war is inescapable, peace might yet become an actuality.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON

Washington—In addition to the tough trans-Atlantic telephone conversations with Senators Connally and Vandenberg, there was one other factor in the back of President Truman's mind which led finally to Henry Wallace's resignation.

Truman remembered how, nine months before, Byrnes himself was under terrific inner-cabinet fire for entertaining somewhat the same sympathetic view on Russia as are now advocated by Wallace. The heat was so great that reports of Byrnes' impending resignation were even circulated.

Truman, however, finally stood by Byrnes and decided to try out the Russian appeasement policy worked out in Moscow last December. Since then the policy has been tried and Byrnes has come to the conclusion that it doesn't work.

In other words, Truman's conclusion after a lot of backing and filling last week, was that the Wallace policy came nine months too late.

Only a handful of Byrnes' advisers know the full story of what happened during his Moscow pilgrimage. However, he did his best to carry out many of the essential ideas now put forward by Wallace, and even concurred with Wallace's proposal of a large commercial credit to Russia—despite the known opposition of Congress.

In September—prior to his trip to Moscow—Byrnes had had trouble with Molotov at the London foreign ministers conference. But after returning to Washington he decided that Russian relations were so important, he would make one more try at improve them.

Part of the trouble, he thought, might be such old-fashioned anti-Russian diplomats as Jimmy Dunn, so this time he left Dunn at home. Instead he took as his chief Moscow adviser, Ben Cohen, a frank, ardent advocate of Russian friendship.

—BYRNES IMPLORES STALIN—

Even so, Byrnes had a difficult time in Moscow. One night during an impasse he conferred alone with Stalin from 1 to 2 a. m. urging him to take advantage of the warm friendship the American people were then ready to extend Russia. Byrnes said the two nations had everything in the world to gain by friendship, and everything in the world to lose through rivalry.

Stalin listened, but seemed unmoved. He made no real concessions regarding democratic forms of government in the Balkans, while Byrnes made important concessions regarding Japan whereby the Russians participated on MacArthur's governing council.

In fact, Byrnes' concessions went so far that MacArthur privately threatened to quit. And when the secretary of state arrived home, he found a hostile group in the White House, led by Admiral William Leahy, ready to tear his agreement to tatters.

Truman, at first, was disturbed by inner-circle criticism of Byrnes' appeasement. Finally, however, he backed up his secretary of state 100 per cent.

It has been events since then have convinced Byrnes that he was wrong and that an appeasement program, such as he and Wallace both believed in nine months ago, won't work. Even Ben Cohen, who was strong for Russian friendship, is now disillusioned. Likewise, Undersecretary Dean Acheson, long-time advocate of cooperation with Russia, has regretfully reversed himself.

They do not believe in deliberately antagonizing the Soviet. But they do believe that the Soviet interprets appeasement as weakness, and that this is a time when a firm policy, coupled with friendship for the Russian people, is the only one we can follow. That was the conclusion finally reached by Truman when he asked for Wallace's resignation.

ARMY WANTS PREVENTATIVE WAR
When the talk turned to Wallace's contention that U. S. military and naval men wanted a preventative war, Truman pulled out a letter sent him that day by the secretaries of war and navy emphatically denying this. Attached was a recommendation by the state department that the letter be made public.

Wallace said he had no objection to publication, but that he considered the statement completely inaccurate. It was common knowledge, he said, that many high officers openly favor an atomic war on Russia. Toward the end of the conference Truman summoned press secretary Charlie Ross to draft a short statement to the press. Ross was the only person to enter the room during the long session.

The two men parted on the best of terms, and it was some hot messages from Paris later that finally ended a friendship which began after the Chicago convention of 1944 when Henry Wallace, defeated, refused to "take a walk" but spent three months campaigning vigorously for Roosevelt and Truman.

THREE HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

One Driver Is Fined For Drunk Driving Here Over Weekend

Three persons were injured, one seriously, in traffic accidents over the weekend in Escanaba and vicinity, and one car driver was arrested for drunk driving, pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $50 and costs.

Most seriously injured was Mrs. Louis Pracy of Escanaba Rt. 1, who suffered a fractured right leg and is receiving treatment in St. Francis hospital. Mr. Pracy was treated for chest and leg injuries.

The accident in which the Pracys were injured occurred at 10:50 p. m. Saturday as they were driving east toward Escanaba on US-2-41 at Pine Ridge. The Pracy car was struck in the rear by a car driven by Melvin Wicklander of 1300 Second avenue south, it was reported by sheriff's officers who investigated the accident.

Immediately following the crash there was a minor collision at the accident scene between cars driven by William G. Benson of 211 Ludington and Harry W. Maas of 826 South 15th street. The Benson car struck the Maas car as Maas slowed down because of the accident ahead of him. No one was hurt in the second accident.

In Escanaba on Ludington street at 10:15 p. m. Saturday August Hartwig of 1622 Fifth avenue south was painfully but not seriously injured when the bicycle on which he was riding was struck by an automobile driven by James Hahn of 119 North 10th street. Although Hahn did not stop following the accident, city police said they were satisfied that he did not know that he had struck the bicycle.

Following an accident on US-2-41 at 11 p. m. Sunday near the Wells road in Wells township, Harold J. McCauley of 915 Superior avenue, Gladstone, was arrested by officers of the sheriff's department and yesterday pleaded guilty to a drunk driving charge when arraigned in Justice Henry Ranguette's court. He paid a fine of $50 and costs. The officers reported that McCauley's car struck the rear of a Delta Cab company taxi driven by George Bougie of Escanaba. Both cars were going north. No one was hurt.

In Escanaba Sunday night about 11:55 p. m. city police arrested Robert Eisman of Au Train Falls for reckless driving, and reported that Eisman will appear Thursday for arraignment.

Resort At Fayette

WHILE many persons will regret that Fayette was not acquired as a state park, there is much consolation to be derived from the fact that the new owner plans an outstanding resort development on the site of the ghost furnace town.

Fayette long has been regarded as one of the most scenic spots in the Upper Peninsula. For years, efforts have been made to have it acquired with public funds for a state or county park, but to no avail. It has finally changed hands in the feverish postwar rush for farms, recreational lands and other properties.

Miss Gladys Edwards, a Detroit business woman, who is the new owner of the 100-acre tract at Fayette, is reported to be planning to build a hotel, cabins, golf course and make improvements to the beach and docks. If her plans are carried out, Fayette as a commercial resort may be worth more eventually to the Garden peninsula than a state park.

The Upper Peninsula still has a shortage of resorts like Blaney Park and other properties on the Door peninsula of Wisconsin and the Lower Peninsula of Michigan. A modern, well-equipped and well-managed resort at Fayette would be a valuable asset to Delta county and the surrounding district.

Helicopters Save Laves

THE rescue of 18 survivors of the Belgian air liner crash in the wilderness of northeast Newfoundland by an American army rescue team and coast guard aircraft, constitutes a humanitarian achievement of which the nation can be justly proud.

The actual rescue could not have been accomplished in the speed required to save the injured except for the efficient use of coast guard helicopters which brought air service to within a quarter mile of the scene of the crash, landing on a boggy plateau from which no other type of vehicles could land or take-off.

The injured were moved on litters the short distance to the helicopters, thence transferred to Catalina flying boats via the helicopters and finally flown to the hospital at Gander, Newfoundland. Some of the injured were flown directly to the hospital by the helicopters.

The success of the rescue mission was due in no small measure to the devotion to duty of Captain Samuel Martin, United States army doctor, and a 13-man army rescue team who moved in overland and treated the survivors for four days before the evacuation could be accomplished.

The value of helicopters in rescue work was proved many, many times during the war. Unfortunately, there still is a shortage of these marvelous machines, which require no elaborate landings fields. Eventually helicopter units will be available in virtually all cities, not only for rescue missions, but for the myriad of other purposes for which these machines can be used. They are destined to play an increasingly greater part in air transportation of the future.

OCD to Quit

THE Michigan Office of Civilian Defense, which has carried a payroll of $1,365 a month for 13 months after V-J day, has finally announced that it is willing to terminate its operations.

The OCD was organized in Michigan to mobilize the civilian population for enemy attacks, which fortunately never came. Long after the threat of invasion and war plane attacks had disappeared, the well-paid employees of the OCD office stayed on the job, trying to make their work appear important to the taxpayers.

OCD offices in Lansing should have been closed many months ago, but the employees tried to hold on to their sinecures as long as possible. They gained in a financial way, but they lost a considerable amount of public respect.

Legalized Gambling

A NEW JERSEY judge has urged that his state's constitution be revised to permit legalized and regulated gambling. Thus one more voice has been added to the small, faint chorus which recently has been making the same suggestion.

The very idea of putting gambling on a legitimate basis and sweetening the public till from the proceeds is repugnant to many, perhaps most, Americans. They are unmoved by the classic arguments that gamblers will gamble anyway, as drinkers drank during prohibition; that some official is getting rich on "protection" where gambling flourishes; that some official might as well be paid in taxes.

What seems to have swelled the faint chorus of support is the experience where legal gambling is actually in operation. In little Saratoga County, N. Y., betting taxes from a four-week race meet netted the county $1,062,000. As a result the county tax has been abolished, the budget increased for next year, and a surplus of $312,000 earmarked for retirement of county bonds.

It is perhaps understandable that some moral resentment by Saratoga County citizens may have evaporated in the face of this windfall. It's pretty hard to get mad over lower taxes.

Divorce Rate Mounts

THE sharply rising increase in divorces in Michigan, particularly in Wayne county where the divorce rate has reached 100 per day, is the cause of considerable apprehension among church groups, who see in the rising divorce rate a further breaking down of the family unit.

The mounting incidence of divorce undoubtedly is due in considerable degree to the wartime marriage boom. Coupled with this is the housing shortage and other unhappy social factors created by the war.

Current marriage and divorce statistics show that one marriage out of three is headed for the rocks and that the rate is on the increase to an even more-alarming degree. The social problems that develop from the wreckage of family lives are tremendous and should be of deep concern to the entire public.

Tightening of the divorce laws is advocated as one solution to the problem and undoubtedly that would help, but it would not solve the whole problem. Married people must be taught to assume the responsibilities that their marriage union involves. The churches are doing all that they can to teach that responsibility but obviously it is not enough. If it were the divorce rate would be decreasing rather than increasing.

HE IMMORTALIZED LUMBERING

(Grand Rapids Press)

Stewart Edward White not only was the most widely read of all Grand Rapids native writers, he also for more than three decades was one of America's most prominent literary figures. No fewer than 51 books came from his pen, the last of which was "The Stars Are Still There," published this year.

For Michigan readers perhaps his most interesting novels are the three he wrote between 1902 and 1908, with this state as a background. Those three, of course, are "Blazed Trail," "The Forest" and "The Riverman," of which the first named still ranks as the best fictional treatment available of the great saga of Michigan's lumber industry.

In his novels of the Michigan woods there are the smell of pine and the sting of driven snow; in them White established himself as the forerunner of an entire school of writers who turned to the north woods for their settings, but White's books still tower above the others in sheer force, historical accuracy and atmosphere. Nor should the enduring popularity of his Bobby Orde stories be overlooked, for they continue as perennial favorites of young readers although they first appeared 35 years ago.

Stewart White's literary interests, however, were not confined to Michigan. In fact, his novels dealing with California gold rush days are considered among his best works. He wrote equally engrossing tales of pioneer days in various parts of America, of the early west and Africa. And his "Arizona Nights," written in 1907, is still one of the most fascinating volumes devoted to the southwest.

He led a full and exciting life, much of which found its way into his books, to the lasting enjoyment of generations to come. He had every advantage of birth, but his fame was built on solid personal achievement. Few men at life's twilight could look back on a more satisfactory record of accomplishment than could Stewart Edward White.

WORDS TO WATCH

Long-lived. This adjective means "having or inclined to have a long life." Despite the spelling, -lived is not the past tense of the verb "to live." It is a combining form from the noun "life." Therefore, -lived should have the long "i." Sound as in "dived," in all the compound words, such as, short-lived, long-lived, nine-lived, etc.

Candidate. In British usage, the third syllable usually has the sound of short "i," as "KAN-di-dit." But American dictionaries prefer the long "a" sound, as in "bait, wait," thus: "KAN-di-dait."

Overheard on a network newscast: "The new president of Mexico, MIG-u-yo-ull AL-u-mun." El presidente's name is: Miguel Aleman. Miguel is the Spanish form of the name Michael. Aleman is Spanish for "German." Be sure to say: mee-GELL-ah-lay-MAHN (hard "g" in mee-GELL).

Cuisine. This French loan word means, "the kitchen; style of cooking; the food prepared," as, "Hotel Blank is noted for its excellent cuisine." The correct English pronunciation is as the French say it, thus: kwee-ZEEN.

Epoch means "a period of time marked by certain events," as, "Henry Ford started the epoch of the automobile." Do not say "EE-pock." Although "EE-pock" is listed as second choice in some dictionaries, it has never prevailed in American usage. Better say: EP-uck.

World Events Analyzed

BY BARNET NOVER

From the viewpoint of its tone and timing, even more than with respect to its substance, the Madison Square Garden speech of Henry A. Wallace was a singularly unfortunate statement.

It is quite possible that Secretary Wallace never intended his remarks to be a frontal criticism of the policies pursued by James F. Byrnes, presumably with the full and enthusiastic backing of President Truman. Indeed, there is passage after passage in the Wallace speech to which the Secretary of State could give his approval.

The fact remains that the tone and the timing of the Wallace speech, plus the initial, if offhand, approval given it by the President were such as to suggest either that the Administration had not really made up its mind regarding foreign policy or that the Byrnes policies were about to be scrapped.

At the Paris Peace Conference I had an opportunity to watch Secretary Byrnes in action at close range. I came away with real admiration for the way in which he has been conducting himself. And I might add that this feeling was very widespread at the conference.

Byrnes' role at Paris has been one of extraordinary difficulty. He knows how important it is for the United States in its foreign relations, and particularly in its relations with Russia, to follow a line that combines firmness with fairness. He is not one of those, nor for that matter is any other member of the American delegation, who believes in a policy of "getting tough" with Russia for the sake of getting tough.

That is the policy which Russia has pursued toward her allies and her neighbors with, it might be said, diminishingly successful results.

Nor do Mr. Byrnes and the members of his delegation believe in the inevitably of conflict with Russia. Their attitude excludes such pessimism. They assumed, and experience has proved it, that it will take a long time to work out a modus vivendi with Russia, but that this can only be done if the policy we pursue is one of devotion to our interests without sacrifice of principle. There are commitments we have made we must live up to. These commitments, in many instances, are Russia's as well as our own, and she, too, must live up to them.

It is one thing to discuss relations with Russia from the happy isolation of an ivory tower. It is quite another matter to have direct dealing with Russia either on Russia's own home grounds or abroad. That, from the viewpoint of American officials of varying political points of view, has been a uniformly discouraging procedure.

In any case the United States has during these last months hammered out a policy toward Russia which is not belligerent but which is also a far cry from the attitude of buying concessions.

This new policy has been making progress. Proof of this is to be found at the Paris Conference. It is even more observable in Germany where American and Russian policies directly clash. In the former Reich I found American military and civilian officials most enthusiastic about Byrnes' Stuttgart speech because, at long last, it represented a clear-cut, workable policy. That belief will now be clouded by doubt as a result of the Wallace speech.

In Europe generally one of the very few reasons which people have to be encouraged is that the United States has hammered out a firm and fixed line.

For a long time the nations and peoples of Europe had their doubts about the permanence of America's shift from isolation. In the back of everybody's mind was the belief that sooner or later the United States would again turn her back on Europe and that would mean not merely a Sovietized or Russian-dominated Eastern Europe but the entire Continent under the sway of the Kremlin.

The fact is that there is no way of dividing Europe into clearly delineated spheres of influence, as Mr. Wallace seems to suggest. Either all Europe is governed by a reign of law or it becomes the creature of anarchy with its recovery held back indefinitely.

It is because Mr. Byrnes has been so insistent on such a reign of law that he has made himself the leader of all the free nations at the Peace Conference, nations that are not body and soul creatures of the Kremlin. But he has never closed the door to agreement with Russia and has no intention of doing so.

After all, our interest in Eastern Europe cannot be dismissed as either unimportant or unworthy. What has happened in that part of the world has affected our destinies in the past and can do so again. That is why President Roosevelt, at Yalta, insisted on a program of democratic action in Poland and the former German satellites in the Balkans and got Stalin to agree to that program. The fact that neither in this nor in so many other particulars has Russia shown any disposition to live up to her pledges has been the basic reason for the growing cleavage between her and the western nations. This cannot be forgotten.

The importance of a coherent and stable American policy is so great that anything which tends to suggest that we lack it is unfortunate and dangerous. By the same token the Wallace speech has been a body blow to American influence at a critical time.

Grosgrain is a name given to silk cloth having heavy (gros) transverse cords. The word is French, but the American pronunciation is only partly French. The "o" is long, as in "hoe, toe," and the "s" is silent. The second syllable, -grain, is pronounced as in English, thus: GROE-grain.

THE WORLD TODAY—It is not a very remarkable observation, but one often overlooked, that the same conditions, prejudices, hopes and fears evident in your own community are those found in the world today.

Madrid—A ten-foot wall of water, released from Alberche dam by government forces, roared down on a column of Fascists advancing on Madrid and swept many of them to their deaths. It was reported late last night.

Interested primarily in the nomination of R. B. Stack for state auditor general, a delegation of about 15 Delta county Democrats are taking an active part in the Democratic convention being held at Battle Creek today and tomorrow.

20 Years Ago—1926
Manistiquette—Tom Sheppard was brought to the local hospital on Saturday, suffering from bruises and minor injuries received in an accident while employed at Gould City.

Announcement has been received of the birth of a daughter, born Sunday to Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Nearman at Iron Mountain. Mrs. Nearman was formerly Miss Geneva DeVost of this city.

A pretty wedding ceremony was solemnized at the parsonage of the Swedish Lutheran church Saturday afternoon when Miss Alice Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Johnson of Ford River, was united in marriage to Harold Leich, of Oskaloosa, Ia.

Cloverland Post, American Legion, yesterday sent the following telegram to Gene Tunney, who meets Jack Dempsey in a championship bout tonight in Philadelphia: "We are with you, Big Boy; knock him cold."

OF LITTLE FAITH—Within the community you have abject poverty (the Red Cross recently appealed for clothing for Delta county children of unfortunate families); you have those who need financial assistance to establish themselves in business (several new industries were encouraged to locate in Escanaba through an industrial development program sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce); and the wealthy who make gifts to provide better educational facilities for the young.

Yet within that same community there are people who believe that similar evidences of good will and sound judgement to bring about a better world would not only be hopeless—it would be dangerous.

They believe this because they are still consumed with the fever of "community spirit," which translated into world affairs becomes "nationalism." They may grasp the wisdom of community, state and national cooperation, but they refuse to consider the hurdle of world wide cooperation. This hurdle must be considered by the individual American from the standpoint of helpfulness.

Groping efforts under way at the peace conference in Paris must be thought of in the light of community slogans—"If you can't boost—don't knock" for example. No community (and the world is a community in a larger sense) can achieve a semblance of unity in solving any problem unless there is a courageous and confident approach.

THE NEXT WAR—It is an unusual commentary upon our thought processes, but Americans in the deaths of war fight for a permanent peace, and after achieving peace refuse to seriously consider the possibility of making peace permanent.

A. Your wife is eligible for the benefits under the EMIC program if you can establish the fact that her pregnancy existed at any time prior to your separation from the Army.

Q. Can you furnish me with a recipe for a deviled ham salad?

A. Spread thin slices of bread with deviled or potted ham. If mixture is to be made at home, run boiled ham through the finest knives of a meat grinder, and mix with mayonnaise and a little prepared mustard. A delicious combination is to spread thin slices of nut bread with cream cheese and deviled ham.

Q. Please tell me how I can remove a colored candle stain from one of my newest dresses.

A. Remove the paraffin as completely as possible. Then dissolve the dye remaining on the fibre by sponging with wood alcohol. Carbon tetrachloride, chloroform, acetone, or benzol also are effective.

Q. Is Alex Templeton, the famous pianist, totally blind?

A. Yes. He has been blind since birth.

Q. Why was Robert Morris who was appointed to the U. S. Board of Treasury in 1781, called the "Financier"?

A. Because of his exceptional abilities, especially while he was Superintendent of Finance during his appointment.

Q. How should a female master of ceremonies be addressed?

A. Toastmaster is correct, regardless of the sex.

Q. Why is the exterior of a cannon tapered?

A. To reduce the weight of the gun. When the powder charge is first detonated the pressure is great, and the gun must be thick at the base to withstand it. This thickness is not needed at the mouth and the guns are tapered according to pressures.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON

Washington—In addition to the tough trans-Atlantic telephone conversations with Senators Connally and Vandenberg, there was one other factor in the back of President Truman's mind which led finally to Henry Wallace's resignation.

Truman remembered how, nine months before, Byrnes himself was under terrific inner-cabinet fire for entertaining somewhat the same sympathetic view on Russia as are now advocated by Wallace. The heat was so great that reports of Byrnes' impending resignation were even circulated.

Truman, however, finally stood by Byrnes and decided to try out the Russian appeasement policy worked out in Moscow last December. Since then the policy has been tried and Byrnes has come to the conclusion that it doesn't work.

In other words, Truman's conclusion after a lot of backing and filling last week, was that the Wallace policy came nine months too late.

Only a handful of Byrnes' advisers know the full story of what happened during his Moscow pilgrimage. However, he did his best to carry out many of the essential ideas now put forward by Wallace, and even concurred with Wallace's proposal of a large commercial credit to Russia—despite the known opposition of Congress.

In September—prior to his trip to Moscow—Byrnes had had trouble with Molotov at the London foreign ministers conference. But after returning to Washington he decided that Russian relations were so important, he would make one more try to improve them.

Part of the trouble, he thought, might be such old-fashioned anti-Russian diplomats as Jimmy Dunn, so this time he left Dunn at home. Instead he took as his chief Moscow adviser, Ben Cohen, a frank, ardent advocate of Russian friendship.

—BYRNES IMPLORES STALIN—
Even so, Byrnes had a difficult time in Moscow. One night during an impasse he conferred alone with Stalin from 1 to 2 a. m. urging him to take advantage of the warm friendship the American people were then ready to extend Russia. Byrnes said the two nations had everything in the world to gain by friendship, and everything in the world to lose through rivalry. Stalin listened, but seemed unmoved. He made no real concessions regarding democratic forms of government in the Balkans, while Byrnes made important concessions regarding Japan whereby the Russians participated on MacArthur's governing council.

In fact, Byrnes' concessions went so far that MacArthur privately threatened to quit. And when the secretary of state arrived home, he found a hostile group in the White House, led by Admiral William Leahy, ready to tear his agreement to tatters.

Truman, at first, was disturbed by inner-circle criticism of Byrnes' appeasement. Finally, however, he backed up his secretary of state 100 per cent.

It has been events since then have convinced Byrnes that he was wrong and that an appeasement program, such as he and Wallace both believed in nine months ago, won't work. Even Ben Cohen, who was strong for Russian friendship, is now disillusioned. Likewise, Undersecretary Dean Acheson, long-time advocate of cooperation with Russia, has regretfully reversed himself.

They do not believe in deliberately antagonizing the Soviet. But they do believe that the Soviet interprets appeasement as weakness, and that this is a time when a firm policy, coupled with friendship for the Russian people, is the only one we can follow. That was the conclusion finally reached by Truman when he asked for Wallace's resignation.

ARMY WANTS PREVENTATIVE WAR
When the talk turned to Wallace's contention that U. S. military and naval men wanted a preventative war, Truman pulled out a letter sent him that day by the secretaries of war and navy emphatically denying this. Attached was a recommendation by the state department that the letter be made public.

Wallace said he had no objection to publication, but that he considered the statement completely inaccurate. It was common knowledge, he said, that many high officers openly favor an atomic war on Russia. Toward the end of the conference Truman summoned press secretary Charlie Ross to draft a short statement to the press. Ross was the only person to enter the room during the long session.

The two men parted on the best of terms, and it was some hot messages from Paris later that finally ended a friendship which began after the Chicago convention of 1944 when Henry Wallace, defeated, refused to "take a walk" but spent three months campaigning vigorously for Roosevelt and Truman.

THREE HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

One Driver Is Fined For Drunk Driving Here Over Weekend

Three persons were injured, one seriously, in traffic accidents over the weekend in Escanaba and vicinity, and one car driver was arrested for drunk driving, pleaded guilty and paid a fine of $50 and costs.

Most seriously injured was Mrs. Louis Pracy of Escanaba Rt. 1, who suffered a fractured right leg and is receiving treatment in St. Francis hospital. Mr. Pracy was treated for chest and leg injuries.

The accident in which the Pracys were injured occurred at 10:50 p. m. Saturday as they were driving east toward Escanaba on US-241 at Pine Ridge. The Pracy car was struck in the rear by a car driven by Melvin Wicklander of 1300 Second avenue south, it was reported by sheriff's officers who investigated the accident.

Immediately following the crash there was a minor collision at the accident scene between cars driven by William G. Benson of 211 Ludington and Harry W. Maas of 826 South 15th street. The Benson car struck the Maas car as Maas slowed down because of the accident ahead of him. No one was hurt in the second accident.

In Escanaba on Ludington street at 10:15 p. m. Saturday August Hartwig of 1622 Fifth avenue south was painfully but not seriously injured when the bicycle on which he was riding was struck by an automobile driven by James Hahn of 119 North 10th street. Although Hahn did not stop following the accident, city police said they were satisfied that he did not know that he had struck the bicycle.

Following an accident on US-241 at 11 p. m. Sunday near the Wells road in Wells township, Harold J. McCauley of 915 Superior avenue, Gladstone, was arrested by officers of the sheriff's department and yesterday pleaded guilty to a drunk driving charge when arraigned in Justice Henry Ranguette's court. He paid a fine of $50 and costs. The officers reported that McCauley's car struck the rear of a Delta Cab company taxi driven by George Bougie of Escanaba. Both cars were going north. No one was hurt.

In Escanaba Sunday night about 11:55 p. m. city police arrested Robert Eisman of Au Train Falls for reckless driving, and reported that Eisman will appear Thursday for arraignment.

Laxatives

Have you sought in vain for constipation relief? Then read this unsolicited letter:

"I suffered from constipation for 25 years. I tried almost everything—from pills to enemas. Then, in 1931, I threw away harsh laxatives and started eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Since then I have been eating it every day and have had gentle bowel movements." Mr. A. T. Holm, 312 1/2 No. Mariposa Ave., Los Angeles 4, Cal.

If you suffer from constipation due to lack of bulk in the diet, you may be freed from this trouble for life—if you eat an ounce of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN every day, and drink plenty of water. If not completely satisfied, after ten days' trial, send empty package to Kellogg Company, Battle Creek, Michigan. You will receive double your money back. ALL-BRAN is not a purgative—but a nutritious cereal that provides gentle bulk helpful to normal laxation. Eat ALL-BRAN every day as a delicious cereal—or in muffins.

Get ALL-BRAN at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg's of Battle Creek and Omaha.

1/2 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 cups cake flour
1/4 teaspoon soda
1/4 cup chocolate malted milk powder
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup milk
Blend shortening, sugar, eggs, and salt. Sift flour with malted milk powder, soda, and baking powder; add this alternately with milk to shortening mixture.

Bake in two greased eight-inch layer pans in a moderate oven (350 degrees) from 30 to 35 minutes. Cool, and put together with the following frosting:

Chocolate Malted Iceing

Sift one pound (three and one-half cups) of confectioner's sugar, with one-fourth cup of chocolate malted milk powder. Combine one cup of this with one-fourth cup shortening or butter. Add one-half teaspoon salt. Add remaining sugar mixture alternately with one-fourth cup strong coffee, or enough to give good spreading consistency.

WELLS OUTLINES PLANT BREEDING

Rotarians Hear Talk On Development Of New Plant Varieties

How are new and more desirable varieties of potatoes, tomatoes, oats, barley and other small grains obtained that will be more suitable to Upper Peninsula conditions? James G. Wells, superintendent of the state experimental farm at Chatham, outlined such procedures in a talk to the Escanaba Rotary club at its meeting yesterday noon in the Delta hotel.

Wells prefaced his talk with an explanation concerning the full utilization of agricultural land in the Upper Peninsula, and pointed out that aside from potatoes and dairying, the area is not self-sufficient in producing the food its people need.

Experiments at Chatham to develop new plant varieties and improve old ones are "on the practical level," Wells pointed out. Much of it is in the planting and care of new varieties which need further testing, and the crossing of certain established varieties to develop more hardiness and resistance to disease.

Wells told how experiments in plant breeding are made to obtain a potato which will be white-skinned, scab-resistant and mature early. Early maturity is important to U. P. growers, and a white-skinned potato brings "15 to 20 cents more per hundred pounds when sold in Chicago markets," he explained the crossing experiments, which take many years to complete—and may end in failure.

Development of the Early Chatham variety of tomato, the experiments in small grains and corn also were described.

The Rotarians were entertained by a quartet composed of Rotarians James E. Frost, Louis Hildebrand, Marvin L. Coon and O. V. Thatcher, who sang several numbers.

FR. LAMOTHE DIES SUNDAY

Was Sacred Heart Church Pastor For Eleven Years

Munising—Father Ovid J. LaMothe, pastor of the Sacred Heart Catholic church, Munising, died at 7:50 o'clock Sunday evening, September 22 at St. Mary's hospital, Marquette after about a week's illness. He had been in failing health the past two or three years.

Father LaMothe came to the Munising church May 15, 1935. His first assignment to a church was as assistant pastor of St. Ignace church, Houghton where he served for seven years. In August, 1929 he was appointed pastor of the Rapid River Catholic church and of the Tremaine mission. Four years later, 1933, he received appointment as pastor of the South Range-Atlantic Mine church and remained there until May 15, 1935 when he received the pastorate of Sacred Heart church, Munising, succeeding Rev. Peter F. Manderville.

Father LaMothe was not only known as a priest throughout the Upper Peninsula, but as a public speaker, interested in both foreign and American topics. He was well read on these subjects and gave many public speeches, the last one being in Munising on V-J day.

Born in 1895 in Hubbell in the Copper Country he was one of a family of 12. At the age of 15 he entered Notre Dame University, South Bend, Indiana where he completed his high school studies and took a preparatory course. He was enrolled there for seven years.

In 1917 he entered Champion college at Prairie du Chien, Wis., where he finished college work. While there he was active on the football and basketball teams.

Father LaMothe enrolled in St. Francis seminary at Milwaukee to become a priest and completed his theological education there and was ordained on June 11, 1922 by Archbishop Messmer of Milwaukee.

EUROPE SPARED WORST FAMINE

Crops Were Fairly Good On Continent During War

Chicago—Europe's famine conditions might be far worse than they are, had not the war years on the Continent also been good crop years, Prof. Wendel H. Griffith of St. Louis University medical school told the meeting of the American Chemical Society here. During the war, Prof. Griffith was chief of the nutrition branch of the Office of Chief Surgeon, E. T. O.

Although rationing and hard times prevailed in the cities, he added, the country people in Germany and German-occupied countries did not fare too badly. They simply kept enough of the food they produced to provide for their own needs before sending anything to the cities.

The Nazi policy of deliberate starvation of prisoners naturally worked hardships on prisoners of war, and even worse hardships on political prisoners. The malnutrition itself, however, carried with it a certain kind of protection: due to the slowed-down physiological processes of the emaciated prisoners, the effects of vitamin lacks were less pronounced than might have been expected.

This latter observation was confirmed in another paper presented at the same session by Dr. Herbert Pollack, New York City physician.

LIBRARY BOARDS MET AT BLANEY

Eleven Communities in Area Represented At Conference

Members of the Manistique Public Library Board, who recently attended the Library Trustees' conference held the latter part of the week at Blaney Park, report a very interesting and worthwhile two day session.

Fifty-six people, representing eleven communities in this area, took part in the conference. One of the most stimulating features of the session was a panel discussion by representative board members on the responsibility of the trustee. The subjects discussed were interpreting the library to the community, procuring finances for adequate services, and distinguishing between policy making and administrative functions.

Outstanding among the talks given at the conference was one by Raymond Lindquist, librarian of the Cuyahoga County Library at Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Lindquist pointed out that it is increasingly important to foster dynamic means of disseminating educational materials to adults as well as to the youth of our communities. Living in an atomic era brings with it an obligation to bring about an informed citizenry. "The public library," he said, "holds a distinctive place as an adult education agency in furthering this obligation."

Saturday morning's session was devoted to areas of interest raised by the panel discussion. Library laws, finances and standards were considered by smaller groups of trustees. One of the greatest values evolving from the conference, it was generally agreed, was the inspiration coming from the interchange of ideas among the trustees. A series of fine exhibits had been arranged, some by libraries in the Northern Peninsula and others by the Michigan State Library. The conference closed with a luncheon at which the principal speaker was Richard M. Dorson, collector of Upper Peninsula folklore.

CIRCUIT COURT CONVENES HERE

Anderson Vs. Anthony
Cases Claim
Spotlight

The number of cases to be tried in the September term of Schoolcraft county circuit court shrunk materially a few minutes after the session convened Monday afternoon, and the chief matter of general interest to come up for trial are the two cases, The People vs. Lena Anthony and Lena Anthony vs. Elmer Anderson.

The former case is an appeal from a recent justice court case in which Mrs. Anthony was found guilty of a breach of peace. G. S. Johnson, city attorney, is prosecuting the case and J. Joseph Herbert is attorney for the defense. At the outset of the case, Mrs. Anthony's attorney requested a waiver of trial by jury, which was granted by the court. This being the only jury case on the calendar, the jury panel was dismissed.

The case of Lena Anthony vs. Elmer Anderson is a civil suit brought by Mrs. Anthony who alleges false imprisonment, a case arising out of incidents arising at the time of her arrest on the breach of peace charge. J. Joseph Herbert again represents Mrs. Anthony and W. Strom, of Escanaba, is attorney for Anderson.

The request on behalf of Anderson's attorney asking that the case be continued was the cause of a lively word battle between the two counsels. Strom claimed that inasmuch as he had only recently been hired to handle Anderson's interests in the case, he would be handicapped in the proper prosecution of it. Herbert argued that Anderson's delay in securing counsel was his own fault and was therefore inadequate cause for delay. Anderson was called to the stand by Herbert and questioned concerning his efforts in securing counsel.

The testimony offered by Anderson was the cause of the sharp verbal clash. Herbert finally made the offer that the case be delayed for a matter of ten days. To this offer Strom dissented. Judge H. R. Russell ruled that the matter would be taken under advisement and a decision made after the criminal case against Mrs. Anthony was disposed of.

The case of The People vs. Richard Lehman charged with desertion, was continued to the January term.

Two civil suits, Packard Motor Company vs. J. F. Kluit and Anchor Post Products, Inc. vs. J. F. Kluit and Gertrude C. Kluit will be placed on the calendar upon receipt of word of the defendant's attorney, Dennis McGinn. W. J. Sheahan is attorney for the plaintiffs in both cases.

YOUTHS SPEAK ON UTHROTAR

Richard Olson, Warren
Peterson On Club
Program

Richard Olson and Warren Peterson, Gladstone youths who represented the local Rotary club at the Uthrotar organization meeting held last month at Clear Lake reported on the meeting before Rotarians at the weekly luncheon gathering yesterday noon.

One of the boys gave an overall picture of the meeting and told of the speakers present while the other touched it from a different angle, telling of the organization's constitution.

Supt. Wallace C. Cameron, who introduced the boys, also presented some observations of his own. He expressed the belief that the age limits ban of 16 to 20 was too narrow, it being hard to keep boys interested or loyal to an organization when between 17 and 20. He suggested that it would be better to make the minimum age 15 years.

The next meeting of the club will probably be a joint meeting with Escanaba at Escanaba next Monday at which time National Newspaper Week is to be observed.

The following Monday, October 7, Rotarians will have their annual partridge hunting party and dinner at Round Lake and the following Monday, Oct. 14, the Child's Welfare club, Lions club and Rotary club will join for an adult education meeting.

Student Council To Name Officers Today

Election of officers by the Student Council of Gladstone high school is scheduled for today.

Only one slate of candidates was nominated at the pre-election meeting last week but it is understood that slip candidates are to be run in opposition to some of the nominees.

The race for treasurer is a three-way affair. Here candidates are nominated by the commercial classes and several are always named so that the members of the council may have a choice.

Other candidates nominated on the ticket presented are for president, John White; vice president, Pauline Waeghe; secretary, Barbara Semashko.

SHUTOUT KEEPS CARDS IN LEAD

Cubs Die On Bases As
Harry The Cat Wins
His Own Game

BY JACK HAND
Chicago, Sept. 23 (P)—Harry (The Cat) Brecheen protected the St. Louis Cardinals' half-game lead over Brooklyn today with a brilliant nine-hit shutout, 1-0, driving home the winning run with a third-inning single.

Chicago had men on base in every inning except the third and seventh and moved a base runner to third with only one out on two occasions but never could break through Brecheen's string of zeros. Eleven Bruins were left on base.

Every pitch was thrown with all the deliberation and cool calculation Brecheen would use in a World Series game, for this was a "big one" and the center field scoreboard showed the Dodgers were all tied up with the Phils in Brooklyn during most of the game.

Practice Pays Off
Once again Manager Eddie Dyer's spring training theory of giving his pitchers an extra batting lick paid off in a decisive game, Brecheen's bouncer over second base in the third driving home the winning run.

Joe Garagiola had opened the St. Louis second with a single to right, the first hit off Starter Hank Wyse. Marty Marion's sacrifice bunt moved the rookie catcher to second, setting the stage for Brecheen's game-winning sock, a ball that bounced over second base and took an inspired hop away from Billy Jurges' glove.

The cat-like St. Louis left-hander, whose fielding ability has saved him more than one game, was in real trouble in the second when Bob Sturgeon's single, Bill Nicholson's double and a walk to Jurges loaded the sacks with one out. Fast fielding by Enos Slaughter in recovering Nicholson's smash off the right field wall saved a run.

Wyse, attempting the squeeze play, bunted in front of the plate.

and Sturgeon was forced easily at home. Brecheen got out of the jam by making Stan Hack force Wyse on a roller to Marty Marion.

Fall Spoils Double
The next rough spot was the sixth when Clyde McCullough slammed a 368-foot single off the wall in left center, falling down as he rounded first base on what could have been a sure double. Bob Sturgeon followed with an infield hit off Brecheen's glove but Harry applied the screws to leave both stranded.

Eddie Waitkus reached third on McCullough's single in the seventh after forcing Peanuts Lowrey who opened the inning with a walk. Pinch-hitter Mickey Livingston rapped sharply to Whitey Kurowski whose throw to Garagiola nipped Waitkus with feet to spare.

Bill Nicholson's scratch single off Red Schoendienst's glove applied more pressure in the ninth. Jurges dumped a sacrifice bunt in front of the plate and hesitated momentarily before running to first. Garagiola bumped into him, finally threw wide to second too late for a force and the relay from Marion to first just got Jurges. The Card bench stormed around the plate, charging interference but to no avail.

After Hack walked on a carefully pitched 3-2 curve ball, Lowrey bounced to Kurowski who beat Nicholson to the bag for the final out.

McMillin Promoted To Athletics Boss At U. of Indiana

Bloomington, Ind., Sept. 23 (P)—Indiana university's board of trustees today appointed A. N. (Bo) McMillin, head football coach, as athletic director to succeed Z. G. Clevenger.

Dr. Herman B. Wells, University president, has served as acting athletic director at Indiana since last Aug. 16, when Clevenger retired.

Dr. Wells said McMillin will continue as Indiana's head football coach by order of the board of trustees, which granted him the privilege of naming his own assistant athletic director.

McMillin, who was brought to the campus by Clevenger, is Indiana's ninth athletic director since the post was created in 1894. Clevenger had served 23 years.

The appointment came to McMillin, a native Texan, at the peak of a colorful career and just two days after he launched his silver anniversary season in coaching.

McMillin was at the football practice field today preparing his squad for Saturday's game with Michigan when Dr. Wells sent for him this afternoon to tell him of the appointment.

Senator Swat Star Picking Up Points

Chicago, Sept. 23 (P)—First Baseman Mickey Vernon of the Washington Senators today apparently was headed towards his first American league batting league championship with an average of .356, 15 points ahead of runner-up Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox.

In the season's next to last week, Vernon pounded 10 hits in 25 trips to pick up two points, while Williams appeared only in two games and dropped two points to 341.

Johnny Pesky of the Red Sox maintained third spot with an unchanged .337, while Detroit's George Kell vaulted eight points from sixth to fourth spot with .324.

Other leaders through Sunday's games: Dom DiMaggio, Boston, .319; Barney McCosky, Philadelphia, .318; Luke Appling, Chicago, .309; Vern Stephens, St. Louis, .305; Hank Edwards, Cleveland, .304; and Lou Boudreau, Cleveland, .294.

Williams maintained the lead in two specialized departments—runs batted in, 120, and runs, 141—but shared the home run spotlight with Detroit's Hank Greenberg at 38.

Pesky kept ahead in hits with 203, while Vernon stayed in front in the two-bagger department with 47; Edwards continued as the triple specialist with 15; and George Case of Cleveland's bag of 28 still was tops in stolen bases.

Dave (Boo) Ferris of Boston went without a decision, but his 26-6 record still was tops. Cleveland's Bob Feller fanned 15 to raise his strikeout total to 327.

The Sports Parade

By Ken Gunderson

Neither the Eskymos' defeat at Ironwood nor the Braves' decisive victory at Munising Saturday comes under the category of surprise. The results of both games were just about as most U. P. football observers had figured. For the Eskymos, it was a case of insufficient defense and for the Braves, it was a case of too much defense. We pointed out in this column last week that the Braves possess a line that may be the strongest of any team in the peninsula. That was borne out in Munising when the Braves held the Mathers without a first down, a truly notable achievement.

Despite their 19-7 defeat at Ironwood, the Eskymos served notice to their future opponents that it would be a mistake to take the Eskymos too lightly. The Escanaba offense, spearheaded by Gustafson, a hard hitting line smasher, is dangerous and except for a few untimely fumbles, the Eskymos may have wacked up a couple additional touchdowns at Ironwood. The Eskymos are using their quarterback behind the center this year, taking a direct pass from the snapper, but it is not the T-formation. Except for this variation, the Eskymos are still running their plays from a single-wing formation.

Escanaba will play at Norway next Saturday, opposing the undefeated Vikings whose latest success was a 12-6 victory over Iron River. The Braves will make their home debut Saturday with Manistique's Emeralds providing the opposition. Norway will be the pre-game favorite over the Eskymos, but Coach Ruwitch's lads have a golden opportunity to score an upset. Manistique will have considerably less chance to halt the stampeding Braves, particularly with their ace ball toter, Pat Shaw, out of the lineup.

The big surprise of the past weekend was Crystal Falls' 13-0 victory over L'Anse. This is Crystal Falls' first year of football since pre-war days and the C. F. team wasn't figured to snag a single decision all season. It'll be interesting to note what they do next Saturday at Ontonagon.

Menominee's 30-0 victory over Shawano, Gladstone's 26-0 sparkler at Munising, Iron Mountain's 46-0 rout of Niagara and Marquette's 39-0 triumph over Antigo in addition to Norway's 12-6 margin over Iron River do not exactly bring any cheers to the Eskymo camp. These are some of the toughest that Escanaba still must meet before the curtain rings down on the 1946 season.

Hit and Miss—Hal Newhouse never was sharper than he was Sunday in beating Bob Feller and the Cleveland Indians, 3-0, on two well-spaced hits. The two pitching aces will meet again next Sunday at Briggs Stadium in the final game of the season. Twelve "bowlers" specials have already been chartered for the ABC tournament in Los Angeles next spring. Over 30,000 kegellers and their wives will travel to L. A. in the two-months tournament.

U. P. Association Shows Profit For First Year's Work

The Upper Peninsula Softball association has a cash balance on hand of $143.78 to show for its first year of operation, George Grenholm, president, has announced following receipt of the association's financial report from Treasurer Fred Klaus, of Menominee.

Gross receipts were $334, which included $294 in team registrations and $40 in tournament sanction fees. The U. P. association contributed $98 to the Michigan Softball association and operating expenses were $93. Sanctioning fees of $10 each from 48 Wakefield and Copper Country softball tournaments still remain unpaid.

Aside from the financial aspects, the U. P. Association has made a firm start in its first year, solidifying softball activities in the area.

Trailing Mize among the first ten who have been up 350 or more times at bat are Johnny Hopp, Boston, 336; Dixie Walker, Brooklyn, 325; Tommy Holmes, Boston, 316; Ed Ennis, Philadelphia, 314; Ed Waitkus, Chicago, 309; Enos Slaughter, St. Louis, 304; George Kurowski, St. Louis, 300, and Phil Cavarretta, Chicago, 297.

Mize also heads the parade in home run production with 22 but Rookie Outfielder Ralph Kiner of Pittsburgh is only one behind.

Slaughter is leading by a wide margin in the runs batted in department of play, having driven in 124 runs to runner-up Walker's 115. Pete Reiser of Brooklyn is tops in stolen bases with 35.

Little Murry Dickson of the Cards plays the hurlers with a 14 and 5 mark and Schoolboy Rowe, injured Philadelphia righthander, is second with a 11 and 4 record.

The third placers wasted little time in clinching the game, scoring seven runs in the first two innings off Bob Savage and Everett Fagan.

Vic Raschi, recent importation from the Yanks' Newark International league farm club, went the route in his first major league start and scattered nine Athletic hits.

The rookie righthander fanned eight in handing the tail-end A's their 100th defeat of the season.

Recruit catcher Larry Berra and Charley Keller starred at the plate for the Yanks. Berra hammered his second home since arriving from Newark and Keller belted two doubles and drove in three runs to run his runs batted in figure to 100.

Dickey, who recently was replaced by Johnny Neun as manager of the Yanks, and Ruffing were one of New York's most famous batteries.

New York, Sept. 23 (P)—The New York Yankees ended their home season today by defeating the Philadelphia Athletics, 9-6. It was the Yanks' 47th win as against 30 losses in the stadium this season.

HOT PAGE KEPT UP BY DODGERS

Brooks Smash Phils, 6-1,
With Big Spurt In Eighth Inning

Brooklyn, Sept. 23 (P)—The Brooklyn Dodgers remained hot on the heels of the National League's pace-setting St. Louis Cardinals today by smashing the Philadelphia Phillies, 6-1 while the Red Birds protected their slim half-game lead by downing the Chicago Cubs, 1-0.

For seven innings Rube Melton of the Dodgers and Southpaw Ken Raffensberger of the Phils were locked in a 1-1 hurling duel but the Brooks broke the game wide open in the bottom half of the eighth by scoring five runs to clinch the game.

Carl Furillo walked to start the Brooks' big frame and advanced to second when Pee Wee Reese's bunt hopped over Raffensberger's head for a single. Bruce Edwards moved the runners along with a sacrifice and after Howie Schultz was purposely passed to load the bases, Pinch-hitter Stan Rokaj dropped a fly ball over the drawn-in infield to register Furillo with the tie-breaking run.

The third Dodger run crossed on Ed Stanky's squeeze bunt and Cookie Lavagetto followed with a single to drive in two more. Stanky scampered home with Brooklyn's last run when Augie Galan flew out to Left Fielder Del Ennis.

Philadelphia took a 1-0 lead in the third inning on Emil Verban's single and Skeeter Newsome's double but the Dodgers evened matters in the fourth when Dixie Walker doubled, moved to third on a sacrifice and scored on Edwards' infield hit.

Raffensberger worked him out of another hole in the fifth before the roof fell in on him in the eighth. With two down, Ducky Medwick and Walker singled but Furillo bounced to the veteran lefty to retire the side.

Top Clouter Musial May Finish At .370

New York, Sept. 23 (P)—Stan Musial, the clouting St. Louis Cardinal first baseman, is on the verge of becoming the first National League regular to finish a campaign with a .370 plus batting average since 1937.

The rangy Red Bird enters the final week of the season sporting a .371 average through games of Sunday and appears a cinch to win the individual batting crown as Johnny Mize, injured first sacker of the New York Giants, is second with a .337 mark.

Not since Ducky Medwick led the league with a .374 mark while playing for the Cards in 1937 has a senior loop batsman won the hit derby with a better than .370 mark.

Musial, who won the batting championship with .357 in 1943, has already matched or beaten many of his specialized batting feats this season that he turned in three years ago. Musial finished the 1943 season with 220 hits, 48 doubles, 20 triples, 108 runs scored and 13 homers. Today, Musial leads the league in hits, 220, doubles, 48, triples, 19, runs scored, 118, and has hammered 14 four-baggers.

Trailing Mize among the first ten who have been up 350 or more times at bat are Johnny Hopp, Boston, 336; Dixie Walker, Brooklyn, 325; Tommy Holmes, Boston, 316; Ed Ennis, Philadelphia, 314; Ed Waitkus, Chicago, 309; Enos Slaughter, St. Louis, 304; George Kurowski, St. Louis, 300, and Phil Cavarretta, Chicago, 297.

The memory of these acts of kindness will always remain with us.

BUILDINGS FOR INDUSTRY—Streamlined one-story plants, providing flexibility and economy in production operations, such as the one shown above, are being built by the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce to bring new industries to Oklahoma's capital city. During 1945, 86 new firms were located in Oklahoma City and the first six months of 1946 shows an increase of 68 new businesses.

Oklahoma City C. Of C. Getting New Industries

Under the leadership of their Chamber of Commerce, business men of Oklahoma City, Okla., have organized Oklahoma Industries, Inc., which has been successful in bringing more than 150 industrial and commercial plants to that city within the past year and a half.

Adequate financial support of the industrial program has been pledged by the Oklahoma City business men. As a result, Oklahoma Industries, Inc., is building factory buildings, rebuilding and enlarging existing structures, and also assisting industrial concerns financially in the acquisition of land and buildings.

Eighty-six firms came to Oklahoma City in 1946, and 68 other industrial and commercial businesses were established during the first six months of 1946. Of these new firms which have been established this year, the following are representative: The Industrial Finishing company, a metal finishing process; the Omco company, manufacturers of Indian moccasins and jackets; the Capital Bay company, producers of burlap bags; and the CIB Prefabricated Builders. The National Skyway Freight company (The Flying Tiggers) has its eastern headquarters in Oklahoma City.

Oscar Monrad, industrial engineer of the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce, explains the industrial building program as follows in a letter to Roy Overpack, secretary of the Escanaba Chamber of Commerce:

"The cost of buildings varies considerably with the type of construction. So far we have only entered into an agreement to finance two of them; one, a cement block with brick veneer and a rather elaborate electrical, plumbing and heating equipment is $6.85 per square foot. The other building is being erected for a food processor and is not so elaborate. It is of the same type of construction and is running about $4.50 per square foot.

"In the financing of these buildings we are charging one percent per month or 12 percent per year in order to obtain a five percent return on our money, three percent amortization and an allowance of four percent for maintenance, insurance and taxes. We try to get as good security as we can for our lease and this varies from endorsement of directors and officers to getting the land purchased by the customer and or 1-3 years rent paid as security. We handle each case as an individual transaction."

Not a Water Paint - Not a Powder Paint
Not a Substitute - Not as Good, But Far Better Than Pre-War Quality.

Wallhide is a real oil-base — a Vitolized Oil-base — paint. The use of Vitolized oil results in controlled penetration. Instead of soaking into the surface as in the case of ordinary wall paints, Vitolized oil stays in the film, to keep it Live, tough and elastic. One coat covers any surface, and a Wallhide film cleans easily and withstands repeated washing without marring its beauty. It goes on easily, dries quickly, making possible One Day Painting.
